HAROLD CRUSIUS BIRD, Ph.B., C.E.
PROFESSOR OF CIVIL ENGINEERING, CHAIRMAN OF DEPARTMENT OF CIVIL AND MECHANICAL ENGINEERING.

ENGINEERING IS EXEMPLIFIED BY THE USE OF IRON AND STEEL IN OUR DAILY LIFE. FROM THE TIME WE ARISE FROM OUR BED WITH ITS STEEL SPRINGS AND WASH IN WATER COMING THROUGH STEEL PIPES, UNTIL WE RETURN AT NIGHT TO OUR APARTMENT CONSTRUCTED OF STEEL, WE ARE CONTINUALLY USING SOME OF THE CONVENIENCES DESIGNED FOR US BY THE ENGINEER. DEMAND FOR ENGINEERS AND UNFILLED ORDERS FOR STEEL SERVE AS THE BAROMETER OF PROSPERITY.

ADMINISTRATION

Dr. William Preston Few

DR. WILLIAM PRESTON FEW has served as President of Trinity College and Duke University since 1910. He received his A.B. degree from Wofford College in 1889, A.M. from Harvard in 1893, and Ph.D. in 1896, his LL.D. from Wofford College in 1911, Southwestern University, 1912, Allegheny College, 1915, Syracuse University, 1928, Ohio Wesleyan, 1928, and University of North Carolina, 1932, his Litt.D. from Birmingham Southern College in 1930. In 1933 he was President of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

The Business Division

THE development of Duke University has placed on the Business Division rapidly increasing responsibilities. This office is charged with such duties as the maintenance of buildings and grounds on the two campuses, the providing of adequate classroom, rooming and boarding accommodations, the supervision of loan and scholarship funds, the purchase of supplies, and the collection of accounts. A large staff is thus necessary for the efficient conduct of the different departments.

Dr. R. L. Flowers has been Vice President in charge of the Business Division since 1924, Treasurer since 1923, and Secretary since 1910; he is also Secretary to the Faculty, and Recording Secretary to the Board of Trustees and the Executive Committee. In addition to his duties at Duke University, Dr. Flowers is a Trustee of the Duke Endowment, Greensboro College, the Oxford Orphanage, the Methodist Orphanage, and Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the North Carolina College for Negroes.

Dr. Flowers graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1891. He resigned from the Navy to come to Trinity College as an instructor in Mathematics, serving one year before the college was moved to Durham. He was elected Professor of Mathematics in 1892, receiving his A.M. degree from Trinity College in 1900, and his LL.D. from Davidson College in 1927.

Mr. C. B. Markham, who is Assistant Treasurer, has had a large part in the organization and direction of the Treasurer's Office and in the conduct of the business affairs of the University. Mr. Charles E. Jordan, Assistant Secretary, has direct supervision of the correspondence with prospective students.

ROBERT LEE FLOWERS
A.M., LL.D.
Vice President in the Business Division
Secretary and Treasurer

The transition from strong little Trinity College to the great University of which it is now a part, has been a rapid and remarkable one, a change which Dr. Flowers has seen enacted with a wisely conservative policy of expansion to which he has dedicated his untiring efforts.

Trinity College

William H. Wannamaker
A.B., A.M., Litt.D.
Vice President in the Education Division, Dean of the University

SINCE the founding of Duke University in 1924 as a result of the Duke Endowment provided for in the will of Mr. James B. Duke, there has been a very rapid growth in the size and field of scope of Trinity College. The name of the original college is still retained in this unit of the University which conducts the undergraduate instruction of men students in coöperation with the other divisions of the University, the Woman's College, the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, the School of Religion, the School of Law, the School of Medicine, the School of Nursing, and the Duke Forest.

Dating from 1835, when Union Institute was founded in Randolph County, N. C., the university's lineage passed through the transitions of a change to Normal College in 1851 and in 1859 to Trinity College. In 1892 the college was transferred to Durham, and here its growth continued until the founding of Duke University in 1924.

During the past thirty years of Trinity's growth, Dr. William Hane Wannamaker has been actively associated with the institution, first as an instructor in German, and later on in more important positions. He was graduated from Wofford College with the A.B. degree in 1895. In 1901 he received his M.A. degree from Trinity College. He later studied at Harvard Graduate School, where he received the A.M. degree in 1902, and he did further work studying in German universities at Berlin, Leipzig, and other places. Joining the staff of Trinity College in 1904, Dr. Wannamaker was appointed Dean in 1917. In that year he received the degree of Litt.D. from Wofford College. Since 1926, Dean Wannamaker has been Vice President of the Education Division. He still continues his instructional duties as professor in the department of German.

During his association with Trinity and Duke University Dean Wannamaker has given himself unselfishly to the school, maintaining throughout that time intimate relationship with both student body and faculty in an endeavor to bind the administration more closely to the other two branches of the institution.

The Woman's College

DEAN Alice M. Baldwin came to Trinity College in 1924 as an assistant professor in history and Dean of Women. After the organization of the Woman's College in 1930, she became its first Dean. This year completes a decade of service to the expanding institution.

Dean Baldwin received her A.B. and M.A. degrees from Cornell University and the following year was awarded a fellowship for foreign study the American Association of University Women. Later she received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from the University of Chicago.

Under her leadership, the women students have played an increasingly important part in the life of the University. Since 1896, women have been admitted on equal terms with men, first to Trinity College, and later to Duke University, but it was not until 1930 that the Woman's College was organized as a separate unit with its own campus and administrative officers. In 1924 there was an enrollment of about three hundred women students. Southgate Hall was the only dormitory for women. Today the enrollment has increased to approximately 850.

Different personalities make different contributions to an institution. Dean Baldwin attacks her manifold problems with one outstanding method—that of justice to all and especial favors to none—a practice which unites her subordinates into a fusion of loyalty to the institution of which she is head, and to the policies upon which, with full consultation of their opinion, she may decide.

Not only has there been the sudden expansion, the growth in numbers and in material equipment, but a tradition is being formed, a wholesome social organization is being worked out, and this is due in preeminent degree to the untiring efforts and unselfish spirit of Dean Baldwin.

Alice M. Baldwin
A.B., M.A., Ph.D.
Dean of the Woman's College

It is very hard to carry in parallel two units of an organization without there being a variation in their progress. We find, however, that in the tremendous steps taken in the new division, the women have continually contributed in every field of activity and have established themselves as a vital part of the organization.

The Graduate School

William Henry Glasson
Ph.B., Ph.D.
Dean of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences

DEAN William H. Glasson of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences has been officially connected with this work in Trinity College and Duke University since 1916. In September of that year, he was appointed Chairman of the new Faculty Committee on Graduate Instruction. There were at that time only six such students in the College. In 1917, due to the World War, the development of this department was halted. College men went to training camps and to France instead of to graduate schools. After the War, academic halls were again filled and there were forty-one graduate students registered in Trinity College in 1924-25, when the Duke Endowment provided for the establishment of Duke University. The Graduate School of Arts and Sciences being formally organized in 1926, Dr. Glasson was appointed as the first Dean of the new School.

Dean Glasson has given zealous and unremitting attention to his job during the past eight years and has been rewarded by an increase in the registration to 266 in the academic year 1932-33. The Graduate School has also received the official recognition and approval of the Association of American Universities. At commencement, 1933, eighty students received the degree of Master of Arts, eleven students the degree of Master of Education, and twenty-two, the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

Dean Glasson has engaged in many other activities. He has been Head of the Department of Economics and Political Science since 1902 and a member of the Library Committee and Library Council continuously since 1906. He was Chairman of the Library Committee from 1910 to 1927. From 1905 to 1919, he was joint Editor of the South Atlantic Quarterly and from 1909 to 1919 he was Managing Editor of that periodical. He headed the committee which secured the Phi Beta Kappa Chapter for Trinity College in 1920. He has written two books and many articles on the military pension system of the United States before the World War and is an authority on that subject.

With such a varied background we see that Dean Glasson is well adapted to this diversified department.

The School of Religion

Elbert Russell
A.B., A.M., Ph.D.
Dean of the School of Religion

AFTER seven years of continuous service, during the latter five of which his duties included those of the Dean of the School, Dean Elbert Russell availed himself of the privilege of a year's leave of absence, which he has spent in traveling around the world. He has spent a very busy year in lecturing and visiting places of historic interest in the Orient. During the year the office of Dean has been filled by Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe, who resigned as Book Editor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1928 to become professor of Christian Doctrine in the Duke University School of Religion.

The School of Religion, like the other professional schools of the University, is engaged in preparing young men for service in a vocation, and it also has close connections with the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences since its aims include study and investigation in various fields of religion. The students in this school are fortunate in being able to avail themselves of the opportunities afforded by a great university, especially in the departments of Sociology, Psychology, and Philosophy.

While the Methodist Conferences of North Carolina look to this School for their supply of ministers and their claim is being recognized and met, many of the students are from other Conferences, and young men preparing for the ministry in other churches find in this School practically all they need for service in their respective organizations. Seven denominations have been represented in the student body this year.

The majority of the students are from North Carolina, however seventeen states and nearly all the Annual Conferences of the Southern Methodist Church are represented in the student body. Some students have come from distant points such as California and even Korea. The fact that the students this year have come with the A.B. degree from thirty-eight colleges and universities indicates the wide field from which students are drawn.

Most of the 116 graduates of the School of Religion are now engaged in the ministry as members of Methodist Annual Conferences or as pastors of churches of other denominations.

This division of the school ranks well in the forefront of religious colleges and universities in the country.

School of Medicine and Duke Hospital

Wilbert Cornell Davison
A.B., B.A., B.Sc.,
A.M., M.D.
Dean of the Medical School

Among the most recently organized units of Duke University, the School of Medicine and the Duke Hospital were established in 1925, but it was not until 1930 that the present large and well equipped plant was opened for use.

During the past four years, the medical faculty has made every effort to organize Duke University Schools of Medicine, Nursing and Dietetics, and Duke Hospital, and to establish them on such a firm foundation that real progress can be made in their triple function of instruction, research, and service to the community. The School of Medicine and the Duke Hospital have during this time climbed to a position of prominence in North Carolina and the south, a fact indicated by the some five thousand applications for admission to the School of Medicine, of which about 300 have been admitted, and the registration of over 33,000 patients in the Hospital under the unit history system.

The medical students represent 112 colleges, and 34 states and 10 foreign countries. In addition to these students of the School of Medicine, 39 internes, assistant residents, and residents are spending from one to five years in the wards, laboratories, and operating rooms of Duke Hospital. These physicians are in every sense graduate students, who are receiving instruction as well as gaining experience. Many studies of medical problems have been completed by members of the faculty and student body of the School of Medicine during 1933, and over fifty articles have been published, or are in press.

During 1933, the average hospital census has been 201. The numbers are increasing rapidly. Through the coöperation of the medical faculty, a course of training for hospital technicians was started during the past year and is providing instruction annually for ten students. During the present academic year, a complete medical and health service for all students of Duke University has been operated under the direction of Dr. J. A. Speed, involving the policy of providing all necessary medical attention to the students.

A healthy body as well as a healthy mind is essential for the success of student activity. This phase cannot be exaggerated.

The School of Law

THE current school year has found the School of Law rapidly widening its contacts and extending its influence both locally and nationally. Locally, the Legal Aid Clinic and the Department of Legislative Research and Drafting continue to contribute to the welfare of the state. Members of the Law School Faculty hold such offices in the state as Chairman of the Committee on Uniform State Laws of the State Bar Association, Chairman of a Committee of the State Automobile Association to draft a drivers' license law, President of the State Conference of Social Service, President of the Council on the Emergency in Education, and Chairman of the Section of Juvenile Protection of the State Parent-Teachers' Association. Nationally, five members of the Law Faculty are participating in the work of the Federal Administration at Washington.

Members of the faculty are also participating in important capacities in the work of such organizations as The Association of American Law Schools, The American Bar Association, and The American Law Institute. One of the faculty members is the author of a survey of legal education in the state of California. The program of the Law School is so planned and organized as to make such contacts and such work a regular function, contributing professional service directly to the local and national governments, and at the same time increasing the prestige and teaching capacity of the faculty.

The student body becomes each year a better prepared group. This year again, a considerable number of colleges and more than half the states are represented in the group, while at the same time a larger percentage of North Carolina students are found therein than are to be found in the Trinity College student body. An evidence of the quality of work done in the Law School is found in the successful placement of the members of last year's graduating class.

It is really quite remarkable, and a decided tribute to the ability and perseverance of the Law School heads, that this branch of the graduate schools has made such wonderful progress in such a short length of time, and has taken its recognized place of leadership among schools of law.

The School of Engineering

Harold C. Bird
Ph.B., C.E.
Department of Civil and Mechanical Engineering

ENGINEERING began very modestly at Trinity College in 1887 and has developed so that instruction in this field at Duke is nationally recognized. For the first forty years engineering was given as a major, and graduates were awarded the degree of B.A. In 1927 the curriculum was thoroughly revised, and the degrees of B.S. in Civil and Electrical Engineering were authorized. Mechanical Engineering was introduced in 1930 as a part of the Department of Civil Engineering and has developed very rapidly under the direction of Professors H. C. Bird, W. J. Dana (deceased), and R. T. Matthews. The first degrees in Mechanical Engineering will be conferred this year.

Engineering at Duke has been recognized as being of high standing by the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and the American Society of Civil Engineers. Duke University was made an Institutional Member of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education in 1933.

The engineering equipment is housed in two buildings on the East Campus which were originally occupied by Trinity Park School. These buildings have been completely renovated, and an annex has been added. The Civil and Electrical Laboratories are on a par with any engineering school in the South. Mechanical Laboratories, although begun only two years ago, are developing into well balanced laboratories.

The students of engineering are domiciled in Southgate Hall, which is reserved especially for them. The student activities have been recognized by two national organizations. The Student Electrical Society has been a Student Branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers since 1926, and the student Civil Society has been a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers since 1932. The Duke Society of Mechanical Engineers is petitioning the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and will probably be admitted in the near future.

Electrical Engineering

Each of these three societies meet twice a month, at which times the students themselves give talks on some new engineering development or on some topic of interest on which they have done extensive reading. These meetings give the students an opportunity to gain valuable knowledge about topics of interest which otherwise are not included in their college curricula and at the same time affords them excellent training in public speaking.

Another student organization which takes an active and leading part in all engineering activities is Delta Epsilon Sigma, a local honorary engineering fraternity. This fraternity was formed for the purpose of recognizing leadership and scholarship among the engineering students and at the same time to promote worthy engineering activities.

The climax of student activity is the annual Engineers' Show, which is an exhibit of the engineering equipment and experiments along with numerous special demonstrations and exhibits of engineering principles.

Professor Harold Crusius Bird heads the combined departments of Civil and Mechanical Engineering. Professor R. S. Wilbur, formerly Associate Professor of Mechanical Engineering at the U. S. Naval Academy, recently filled the post left vacant by the death of William Jay Dana, Professor of Mechanical Engineering. Professor William Holland Hall is Professor of Civil Engineering along with Professor Bird.

Professor Samuel Raymond Schealer is Chairman of the Electrical Engineering Department and has as his colleague Professor Walter James Seeley.

Out of these Professors, four of them are listed in "Who's Who in Engineering," one in "Who's Who in America," two in "Who's Who in Education," four in "American Men of Science, two are members of Sigma Xi, three of Phi Beta Kappa, three of Tau Beta Pi, and all have received numerous other honors.

Comptroller

Frank C. Brown
A.B., A.M., Ph.D.

THE duties of directing the building program for the East Campus, now occupied by the Women's College, and for the newer West Campus, occupied by Trinity College and the various graduate units of Duke University, have fallen upon the office of Comptroller. Throughout the construction work on both campuses this position has been ably filled by Dr. Frank C. Brown.

Dr. Brown holds the A.B. degree from the University of Nashville, and the A.M. and Ph.D. degree from the University of Chicago. He came to Trinity College in 1909 as Professor of English, and in this position he still serves. He is head of the Department of English in addition to his duties as Comptroller of the University.

Having acted as Comptroller of Trinity College since 1918, and having in this capacity directed the expansion of the physical plant of the East Campus to its present up to date condition, it was quite natural that Dr. Brown should have been selected to continue to exercise the duties of Comptroller in supervising the planning and later the actual construction of the entirely new West Campus which was to house the enlarged Duke University which had arisen from Trinity College.

The completion of this task of constructing a new plant of architectural beauty along the lines of the old Gothic structures stands as a testimonial of modern efficiency of engineering.

Dean of Curricula

Walter Kirkland Greene
A.M., Ph.D.

DR. Walter Kirkland Greene was graduated from Wofford College in Spartanburg, South Carolina, in 1903. In 1905, he received the A.M. degree from Vanderbilt University. For several years he taught in well-known Southern preparatory schools, such as Battle Ground Academy, Franklin, Tennessee, and Baker-Himel School, Knoxville, Tennessee. In 1910 he organized Greene University School—a preparatory school for boys—in Athens, Alabama. He was Headmaster of this school until 1920, in which year he entered the graduate school of Harvard University and received his M.A. degree in 1921. In February, 1923, the Ph.D. degree was conferred on him by Harvard.

For eight years Dr. Greene was Dean and Chairman of the Department of English in Wesleyan College, Macon, Georgia. In 1928 he was elected to a professorship in English in Duke University and in 1930 he became Dean of Undergraduate Instruction. His work in this particular capacity has to do with the problems of undergraduate teaching, curriculum planning, and administration of the college instructional program. Under his supervision, the grading system has been altered, the quality-point system has been introduced, the group of Honors Courses has been established, and the Curriculum has been re-organized.

Assistant Dean

HERBERT J. HERRING
A.B., A.M.

HERBERT J. Herring was graduated from Trinity College in 1922 with a Bachelor of Arts degree. In 1929 he received an M.A. in College Administration from Columbia University.

In the Fall of 1924, Mr. Herring returned to Duke University after teaching English in Winston-Salem High School for two years as Assistant Dean in charge of the Freshmen and the business of registration of undergraduate students. The rapid increase in the size of the student body made it necessary for a separate office to be organized in 1926 to take care of the Freshman work, and since then Mr. Herring's work has been limited to control of registration of students and records of upper classmen.

Besides his administrative duties, he has the job of adviser to the Junior class. He also conducts a Sunday Morning Bible Class and discussion period. He is a member of the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. and also conducts a course in argumentation and public speaking.

It is the business of Mr. Herring's office to keep all of the permanent records for the undergraduate students and for the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences; it also conducts the registration of the students each semester. The consideration of applications for admission to Trinity College is one of Mr. Herring's most important duties. His office is known as the Admissions and Registrations office.

Dean of Freshmen

In Memoriam
DEAN MOXLEY ARNOLD
1897-1934

IN the death of Dean Moxley Arnold on February 13, 1934, the University lost one of its most devoted and loyal servants. The suddenness of his passing served to intensify the profound grief which stirred the entire community, students, faculty, administration, and friends of the institution. His years of unselfish devotion and unsparing service had won for him a unique place in the esteem of all who knew him.

Born in Ironton, Ohio, Mr. Arnold graduated from the University of Illinois in 1921 with the A.B. degree. He taught in high schools in Ohio and in Durham, and in 1926 received his M.A. degree from Duke University. Beginning as instructor in Mathematics in 1925, he became Assistant Dean in charge of Freshmen the next year. For almost a decade he exerted ever-growing influence over members of successive freshman classes, awakening in the minds of generations of students ideals of service and purity of character and impressing upon them a profound regard for his own sincerity and loyalty to their interests.

For his tireless energy and unflagging zeal, for his valiant combat against the forces of evil and his uncompromising belief in the essential goodness of things, and for his sincerity of motive and purity of ideals, Dean Moxley Arnold will live on in the memory of his hosts of friends.

School of Nursing

Bessie Baker
B.S., R.N.
Dean of School of Nursing

Miss Bessie Baker has been Dean of the School of Nursing and Professor of Nursing Education since the opening of the School in January, 1931. The plan of the School is to give a sound basic course in Nursing Education which will prepare young women to give intelligent nursing care to the sick in hospitals and homes. An introduction to the problems of community health and preventive medicine is also given.

Two general courses are offered in the School. The three-year course gives the student the Diploma of Graduate Nurse on graduation and prepares her for the classification of Registered Nurse by the State boards.

The five-year course is more comprehensive in scope. It awards the degree of Bachelor of Science in Nursing upon graduation, in addition to the Diploma of Graduate Nurse at the end of the prescribed period. Two years of this work, or sixty semester hours, must be completed successfully either in undergraduate departments of Duke University or in some other acceptable college or university, the expense of which is borne by the student. This work may be taken either prior to or at the conclusion of the three years spent in the School of Nursing, but the courses are prescribed in either case.

At the opening of the School of Nursing in 1931, thirty-three students were enrolled, and of these fourteen received their diplomas in the three-year course in January, 1934.

Summer School

Holland Holton
A.B., J.D.
Director of Summer School

Dr. Holland Holton has been connected with the Summer School since its founding in 1919, and since 1920 he has been Director. The expansion of the summer school has been rapid since its organization, and it fills an important function in that it enables students to make up work in a brief period of time. Its curriculum includes courses in many of the subjects offered in the regular sessions. A large percentage of the summer school students are in the graduate school, a fact which indicates that teachers find the Summer School a convenience in adding to their education. Over forty per cent of those enrolled last summer were in the graduate department.

Dr. Holton graduated from Trinity College in 1903 with the A.B. degree. He holds a J. D. degree from the University of Chicago. After a number of years experience in public school administration Dr. Holton became associated with Trinity College in 1912. From that time until 1919 he was instructor in public speaking. At the present time he is a Professor in the department of Education in addition to his duties as Director of the Summer School.

In the past session of the Summer School 964 students were enrolled the first term and 552 the second term. Graduate students enrolled represented 159 colleges and universities. The total enrollment for the summer was drawn from thirty-seven states and ten foreign countries.

Department of Music

J. Foster Barnes
A.B., A.M.
Director of Social and Religious Activities

George Ellett Leftwich
Director of Instrumental Music

Mr. J. Foster Barnes, a native of Virginia, was graduated from Richmond, Virginia, later taking his M.A. degree from Emory University, in Atlanta. From that time his entire career, both as concert singer and teacher, has reflected a primary musical interest deeply permeated with a religious appreciation. His role as leading male part of opera "Thais," given at Chicago, presented an ideal situation for the combination of these two characteristics. In his entire musical career at Duke he has successfully attempted to teach his students not only the joy of singing, but also an appreciation of the religious motif in music.

Mr. Barnes has every year earned well merited praise for his Glee Club. In 1928 the Glee Club of that year won not only state recognition but was ranked as the first college Glee Club of the South. He has announced himself even more pleased with the 1933-34 season than with the memorable season of 1928. Under his tutelage the Men's Glee Club has had a most successful series of concert engagements, while the combined men's and women's glee club gave a special program of Christmas music, rendered a part of Handel's "Messiah" at another special concert, took an important part in the Sixth Birthday Party of the Quadrangle Pictures, and has given a complete musical comedy.

George Ellett (Jelly) Leftwich came to Duke University in 1926 as Director of Instrumental Music, and since that time he has developed an outstanding band and concert orchestra as well as several orchestras of modern music.

Mr. Leftwich, a native North Carolinian, has devoted his entire life to music and its development in both classical and modern fields and in either is at complete ease. Although quite a young man, he has established himself throughout the South and is held in high esteem by conductors as well as music lovers.

Being a student of Mrs. J. D. Edwards of Wilmington, he learned the fundamentals of violin and piano at an early age and later finished courses in music at the Virtuoso School of Buffalo and the University Conservatory of Chicago. His knowledge of instruments covers the entire ensemble and is outstanding on the violin and trumpet.

The university band has won high praise among the bands of the South and the concert orchestra has been featured on continuous tours with the same success.

The composer of "The Blue and White," the University's football song, and co-author of "The Whip," a new song dedicated to the University recently, Mr. Leftwich has established himself as a composer, conductor, and musician possessing a magnetic personality which has won his audiences wherever he has appeared.

Department of Public Relations and Alumni Affairs

Mr. Henry R. Dwire
Director of Public Relations and Alumni Affairs

THE variety of responsibilities falling on the shoulders of the Director of Public Relations and Alumni Affairs require that he be an executive of wide experience and versatile ability, and in Henry R. Dwire, A.B., '02, A.M., '03, there is the ideal situation of the right man being in the right place. Twenty-two years as editor and publisher of one of North Carolina's largest dailies have admirably fitted him for the editorial duties at Duke University connected with the publishing of the Alumni Register, The South Atlantic Quarterly, and other matters relating to the Duke University Press. Likewise his years of experience as a leader in educational and civic affairs have proved him an executive not only of highest efficiency but one whose contacts throughout North Carolina and the South are invaluable in interpreting the University and its ideals to alumni and the public. Mr. Dwire formerly was Governor of the Fifty-Seventh District of Rotary International. His extensive civic activities are indicated in his service in the past as Chairman of the Winston-Salem chapter of the American Red Cross, Chairman of the Community Chest Commission, and Chairman of the Winston-Salem City School Commission. He served the state as secretary of the board of directors of the State Hospital in Raleigh and as a member of the State Board of Equalization. He is now a member of the State School Commission and is Assistant Secretary of the Board of Trustees of Duke University. Mr. Dwire was founder and head of the Fine Arts Foundation of Winston-Salem which for several years was one of the outstanding projects of its kind in North Carolina. The broad administrative responsibilities of the Director of Public Relations and Alumni Affairs include the supervision of the issuance of all University catalogues and other informative publications, publicity, and the maintenance of close contact with the approximately eight thousand alumni living in every state of the Union and nearly thirty foreign countries.

In the more modern lines of contact between the colleges and the public it is evident that a heavy responsibility rests on this department. It is through its efficient conduction thus far that the outside world has had a chance to catch a glimpse of the inner workings of Duke University.

THE SURFACE AND SUBSURFACE FORCES AND MATERIALS OF NATURE REMAIN DORMANT, UNRECOGNIZED, AND WITHOUT VALUE UNTIL THE IMAGINATIVE GENIUS OF THE ENGINEER, BY COORDINATED DESIGN, CONSTRUCTION, AND OPERATION, TRANSFORMS THEM INTO CONVENIENCES WHICH ULTIMATELY BECOME NECESSITIES—THEN THESE FORCES AND MATERIALS OF NATURE BECOME NATURAL RESOURCES. THE COMFORTS AND CONVENIENCES OF OUR MODERN CIVILIZATION, MANY OF WHICH HAVE BECOME NECESSITIES, WERE DENIED TO US UNTIL THE ENGINEER HARNESSED THESE NATURAL RESOURCES AND MADE THEIR ENERGIES AVAILABLE.

THE graduating class of 1934 counts among its numbers the first group of men to advance from Freshmen to Seniors on the new Duke Campus. Though this fact demands nothing in the way of praise, it has been truly an experience which these men will be slow to forget.

As is always the case in colleges, a large per cent of those who enrolled in the class of 1934 have left Duke since. Still, many remained, and there were notable additions to their ranks in the interim.

Looking back over the period, we are able to recall many impressive brush-marks that are still on the canvas, even though now indistinguishable in a much more colorful panorama. The picture then was by no means dull, but there has since been much change.

Two weeks before the fall semester opened in 1930, construction was being carried on here. Many of the buildings were covered with scaffolding. The tennis courts had but recently been laid out. The grounds enclosed in the quadrangle were then not a grassy expanse decorated with shrubbery as now. In place of this there was all rough earth, on which numerous steamrollers, tractors, cement mixers, and the like, were being operated. The buildings, however, were firmly planted enough at this time to give a new onlooker a sense of thrill and the desire to spend four college years in their environment.

Only a few days sufficed for all the building devices to be removed from the spot, and the classrooms, dormitories, and the athletic grounds began to fulfill the purpose for which they were intended. The students of "New Duke," tramping back and forth for classes on planks that formed the only existing walks, were noisy observers of the University Chapel as it was raised from confinement below the level of the green board fence to its present state of grandeur.

It is a source of gratification to Duke's Seniors of 1934 that their college lives have not been valueless to the progress of a new institution; for what is more revealing of that fact than a last sight of the stone buildings which at first excited so much awe? The University buildings now bear the definite marks of personality.

Women's Senior Class

THE 1934 graduating class of the Woman's College of Duke University can look back with pride and pleasure over the accomplishments of the past four years of their school life. These past years have held much for them, years packed with the thrills and sorrows, the successes and the disappointments of college life. Today these Seniors awaken to the fact that this is now all behind them, and that the new college of life lies ahead of them.

The women of Duke University, and especially the class of 1934, have played an important part in making the semi-co-educational system at Duke a great success. Separated from the men's campus a distance of two miles, the women have succeeded in building a life and existence for themselves along. Their relation with the West Campus is no longer that of dependence, but rather of the coöperative relation of a separate and complete entity. In the eyes of many an interested observer, the East Campus holds not only a greater beauty of personnel, but a campus which rivals the scenic grandeur of their associates to the West. The simplicity of architecture and the wide expanse of landscape beauty combine to form a picture of uniqueness which defies description or reproduction.

These graduates who go forth from Duke University leave behind them a period of their life which has been as vital to themselves as to their school. They have become as great a part of their university as their university has become a part of them. The impressions that each has left on the other will endure forever. Thus the Senior Class of this year is fortunate in being able to show a record of achievement in every phase of college activity that will reflect to the glory of their school. In scholarship, athletics, dramatics, Y. W. C. A. work, Student Government activities, and in sorority work they have so worked and striven as to leave behind a record that will serve as an idealistic standard for many a future Senior Class. At the same time the members of the graduating class of the Woman's College pass beyond their undergraduate days with a deep feeling of regret that this phase of their lives now closes, but with a feeling of anticipation of the life that lies before them.

THE DESIGN OF A MODERN COMPLICATED PROJECT REPRESENTS THE COMPOSITE THOUGHT AND COMBINED EXPERIENCE OF MANY MINDS SO CAREFULLY BLENDED, SO WELL BALANCED, AND SO THOROUGHLY INTERLOCKED, THAT EACH PART WILL FUNCTION AND WORK IN UNISON WITH EVERY OTHER PART. THE MANY KINDS OF ENGINEERING MUST BE SO SYNCHRONIZED THAT THE FINISHED PRODUCT SHALL BE PERFECT IN DESIGN, CONSTRUCTION, AND OPERATION. THE ULTIMATE AIM IN EVERY PROJECT IS A PERFECT PRODUCT RATHER THAN A PERFECT DESIGN.

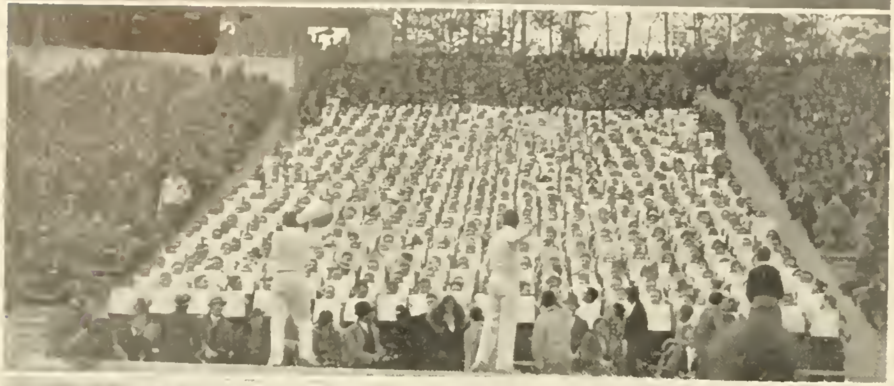
These scenes are located in the open air theatre on the East Campus. The renowned natural beauty and splendor of Duke University is, as in many places, very pronounced here. Does it seem a wonder to you that one could become attached to such a locality especially with the added attraction of such feminine allure.

The girls have a dance? The Co-ed Ball: Between classes—with every word a reputation dies. The girls again, they take a workout in the day time. The page is full of girls—the ages also—this next is a fashion show of Progress—Oh My! We catch the sororities? The Engineers forget their work in a night of revelry . . . ladies, music.

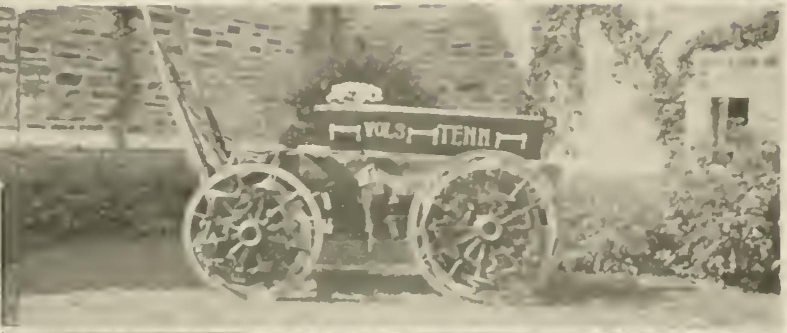


The annual bon-fire—a creator of school spirit. A part of the cheering section. The Carolina game—the traditional goal posts to the winner its ours for the second time. The boys of '87—that was another championship team. When we come to the end of a perfect day—year—college career—graduation day—then what?

The riders are here, the horses are on page ——; if you are superstitiously inclined Tennessee didn't have a chance—even hung in effigy; freshman week; some of the girls left holding the bag; the Zeta's advertise the pledges don't they? Then the renowned Victory Bell, is this what you see in the picture? "Clark Gable" Keller introduces his friends.

Not too close mister, that's my nose you're driving from; Otis puts the pressure on them; bottom's up and its freshman week; waiting for a ride—a truck? Seven of THE BOYS. The Engineers—aren't they industrious. "Come up some time." "So boys, I shot that nigger. The staff discusses the problems of the day. The mighty odor club.

Here are the horses we were looking for, where are the riders? Alpha Sigma Sigma—please get a member to pull this wagon away. Bagging big game. An apple a day—Oh doctor! Who took this picture? Majestic beauty bathes the chapel tower. The answer to a dream, a career, a prayer, its O D K tapping.



What would Volstead say—what would prexy say—what would you say? A prehistoric—which is the monster? Three Phi Betes in a formal pose; nuts—and seriously now, we think this is the best football still of the year—a few minutes—all keyed for one of the big games. A student—he must be—we caught him twice. Welcome Grads anyway. Athletes—millions of them, and all S A E's.

Look at the girls first and then at the Chapel tower and see if the latter doesn't look off balance—it did to us! Another student, my how the public is fooled! A game of golf at Hope Valley. Last minute instructions I'd say the're ready to go. What a finish for this section—what a finish.

A system of Student Government was established at Duke in 1922. Since that time, the system has been constantly changing, growing, and developing into a worthy system of government.

Our Student Government has taken an active part in student affairs and problems, not only on our campus, but in North Carolina and throughout the United States. Duke University was one of the first to help establish the North Carolina Federation of Students. In 1930 we became a member of the National Student Federation of America, and have offered our support to this organization. Student government is a comparatively new system of government, but it has advanced exceedingly far at Duke.

The Student Government has tried to live up to the ideals upon which it was founded. The students sponsored several large parades this year in order to breed a good school spirit and give their support to the athletic teams. Programs, in which the students took part, were arranged for the spectators during the different athletic contests.

There have been several changes in the internal workings of the student council. All records and cases in the past have been brought together in a new system of filing. Several by-laws have been passed in order to improve the internal organization of the council.

The purpose and aim of Student Government is to "create an effective organization for administering student self-government, to support athletics, to foster literary endeavor, to encourage all other worthy student activities, and to promote the best interests of the University and student body."

During the fall a large Student Government dance was given for the whole student body. The Inaugural Spring Ball has become a tradition.

For the past three years student government at Duke has grown enormously in power and prestige. Under the able administration of Martin Green, Wendell Horne, and Joseph Shackford many changes have been made that were necessary to strengthen failing power of this organ of student life. Through wise and just legislation it has gained a worthy position in the eyes of the University administration and exerted potent influence over the general student body. It is laying down and enforcing rules that are to become traditions as the University grows in age.

ALTHOUGH Student Government has been a part of student life at Duke since 1922, it is only since 1931 that the bicameral system has been employed. Previous to this change, the Student Council was the sole unit of control, having executive, legislative, and judicial functions. The House of Representatives, with the Vice President of the Men's Association as Speaker, was added to lighten the burden on the council and to secure greater efficiency, as the House is essentially the legislative branch of the association and is the lower house so-called, corresponding in a sense with the lower or popularly representative branch of many national, state, and municipal governments of the twentieth century.

Ireland — M. B. Williams — Jones
McNeil — Wentz — Cox

Originally the membership of the House was limited to one man from each dormitory section, said student to be a resident of the dormitory electing him. However, it was found upon trial that such a large body was too unwieldy for efficient performance, and further that due to the manner of election, the representatives did not place sufficient value on their office to induce whole-hearted effort.

Therefore, in May, 1932, there was proposed a system of general and popular election of six men to compose a House of Representatives, these men to be from any class in the undergraduate school, although juniors and seniors may, by custom be elected each year. This system was adopted and its operation to date indicates its worth.

According to the Constitution of the Men's Association (Art. IV, Sec. 3, 5.) which was revised and adopted by the general student-body, the House of Representatives shall be empowered to enact legislation concerning dormitory conditions, shall give advice to the council on all other legislation, and shall propose to the council by-laws for the constitution or any changes in the system that shall be deemed for the welfare of the general student body.

Tyrus Wagner
Secretary-Treasurer

During last year, the House of Representatives established the quiet period, so-called, from 7:30 o'clock continuing through until next morning, to be in force every night except Saturday and occasions of importance to the students generally. Radios, long a point of contention, are tolerated on the campus at present, but with the express understanding that they are not to be operated during the quiet period in such a manner as to disturb others living adjacent.

At general assemblies the House of Representatives, through its Speaker, places the whole matter of dormitory regulation before the undergraduate men to ascertain student attitude and opinions. During open discussion from the floor of the assembly, a resolution was made and unanimously accepted approving the regulations and policy of the House of Representatives, and greater coöperation by the students was promised for the future. It was also agreed to refer to the House all cases of flagrant violations of the rules, when this body would investigate and take steps to secure the full coöperation of those concerned.

Dormitory supervision, although the greatest single contribution of the House of Representatives, is only one of the several phases of student life in which it has been of service. Almost every matter of interest to the students is discussed and referred to proper authorities to further the welfare of the student body.

Apparently the efforts of the House of Representatives have justified its institution as a branch of student government at Duke, and in the future greater service can logically be expected from it. The bicameral system, no doubt, is here to stay.

Woman's Student Government

Augusta Walker
President

Officers

Eleanor Tompkins
Corresponding Secretary

Sarah Thompson
Assistant Treasurer

THE purpose of the Woman's College Government is to guide student affairs by developing a sense of unity among the women. It also aims to increase the spirit of individual leadership through the coöperation of the faculty.

The president, who is elected by a majority vote of the student body, presides over all Association meetings called at her discretion. It is her duty to oversee the work of the eighteen officers and committees of the Student Government. It is to her that the students look for leadership in the expression of their desires. Not only is she responsible for the execution of campus affairs by the aid of the Government's constitution, but also she must be present at the judicial trials.

Under the term of Miss Walker and by her initiative, the Student Government Association of 1933-1934 has progressed in internal as well as external reform and improvement. The definite advances made by this year's administration include: the gaining of riding privileges, the establishment of a definite warning system, and the organization of a uniform House government. Radios have been placed in the parlor of each house by the Council.

Another special project has been the organization of an entirely new system of elections. This system is comparable to the Civil Service System of the National Government. Any success of this system is due to the laborious work and concentration of the Council and the members of the Examiner's Board. A political rally was planned and sponsored by the Student Council for the first time in the History of the Woman's College.

Woman's College Council

THE Student Council of the Woman's Student Government is bicameral in structure. It is composed of the Executive and Judicial Boards.

The Executive Board represents the organization and has the power to make regulations necessary to perform the functions of the organization and to enforce the constitution and by-laws. The weekly meetings are held with the purpose of executing legislation. Committees are appointed by the president, and are the means of transacting minute business. The Executive Board takes recommendations that the Judicial Board may offer, considers them, and presents them to the entire association or to the staff. By this process certain privileges are extended to the students.

The Judicial Board deals with major offenses and matters referred to it by the Executive Board. This year a system of warnings was established for House Government. Violations of House regulations are dealt with by the respective House Committees. A repeated violation of the same offense is brought before the Judicial Board and dealt with accordingly. This board is composed of the House Presidents, one non-partisan member, and is presided over by the vice president. It is a student's board, operating free from faculty jurisdiction.

The Social Standards Committee

THE Social Standards Committee is composed of a group of Duke women, selected for their social leadership, whose purpose is to guide the activities of the Woman's campus. Its aim is to develop the finest social relationship between men and women students.

The major function of the Committee on Social Standards is the sponsoring of the traditional Co-ed Balls. These gala affairs are highlights on the social calendar of the University and are most eagerly anticipated by both men and women. The management and upkeep of the Ark is another duty of the Committee. In the Ark Duke students spend many delightful evenings with the radio, piano, ping-pong tables, and various other forms of amusement.

Because of varied environments from which the students come to Duke, they are aided in becoming assimilated into the life of this college by the Social Standards Committee. It is this committee which first introduces the women into the social life of the University by aiding contact between the new women and the upperclassmen, and by introducing them to Duke men in a desirable manner. Friendships, not only with the members of the University community, but also with the residents of Durham, are encouraged.

THE Duke University Young Men's Christian Association was organized in 1887 and soon after that time became affiliated with the National Council of Student Christian Associations which is a part of the World Student Christian Federation.

The four most outstanding projects the Y. M. C. A. has sponsored this year are:

Freshman Week, during which thirty "Y" men were present on the campus to assist Freshmen in becoming adjusted to college life.

Jim Hardwick Week, which came in October and was devoted to group meetings, discussions, and hikes arranged by the Discussion Committee and led by Jim Hardwick, "Y" travelling secretary.

Religious Emphasis Week, or more appropriately, Dr. Crane Week, which came early in December. Dr. Henry Crane of Scranton, Pa., was brought to this campus by the University and the Y. M. C. A. as visiting preacher. A thousand students were out to hear him each time he spoke and hundreds had personal interviews with him.

Student Expression Week, which came the latter part of March and during which all meetings and services were given over to student expression in various fields, including Religion, Student Affairs, Music, and Drama. This was a new project but was quite worthwhile and can be improved upon in years to come.

Y. M. C. A. Cabinet

The work of the World Fellowship Committee among the foreign students on the campus, its social service, inter-racial, and boy's work is worthy of note. This committee brought Mr. Kirby Page, Mr. Herman Lum, and Dr. Charles Hurry to the campus as speakers on international topics. Mr. Paul Derring, from V. P. I., and Mr. Claud Nelson, from the Y. M. C. A. Graduate School, have been brought to the campus this year by the Y. M. C. A.

The Social Committee has sponsored Open Houses on Thursday nights and two "Y" Retreats. The Recitals Committee has presented four Thursday evening recitals to the University Community free of charge. The Employment Committee has served as a clearing house in securing employment for students in Durham. The Library Committee has provided periodicals and books for the Y. M. C. A. Reading Room. The Freshmen Friendship Committee has done effective work through the friendship Council.

The Y. M. C. A. sends delegates to various Student Christian conferences and besides rendering miscellaneous services to the student body, sponsors the Open Forum Bible Class, Organ Meditation Periods, and Discussion Groups. It sponsors Quadrangle Pictures, and publishes the Duke Handbook and the Student Directory.

THE Sophomore Council of the Duke University Y. M. C. A. was organized last Fall as a new project of the "Y." It is composed of the men who were active in last years Freshman Friendship Council and other Sophomores interested in "Y" work. Its members serve as assistants to the Committee Chairman on the Y. M. C. A. Cabinet which is made up of Juniors and Seniors.

The Sophomore Council took an active part in Freshman Week, assisting the Freshmen in getting acquainted with their new environs and helping the administration in its orientation program for the Freshmen. During Jim Hardwick Week, the Council assisted in promoting discussions, and worked with the "Y" in the arrangements for Dr. Crane's services. The Council assisted in sponsoring Student Expression Week in March.

THE Freshman Friendship Council is a social organization for the purpose of promoting friendships among the Freshmen and training the future leaders of the Y. M. C. A. Many different types of meetings have been held. Hikes, smokers, retreats, informal discussions, student programs, talks by the faculty and outside speakers, and socials have composed the year's program.

The council conducted several activities for the entire Freshman Class. This group conducted a successful hike to which the whole class was invited. The council also sponsored the Freshman Oratorical Contest in which a number of Freshmen participated. The winner was presented with a silver cup upon which his name was engraved. The council started a movement for the construction of a Y. M. C. A. cabin in the Duke forest for retreats, meetings, and social functions.

Young Women's Christian Association

THE Young Women's Christian Association of Duke University, a member of the Young Women's Christian Association of the United States of America, and a participant in the World's Student Christian Federation, declares its purpose to be:

"We, the members of the Young Women's Christian Association of Duke University, unite in the desire to realize full and creative life through a growing knowledge of God.

"We, determine to have a part in making this life possible for all people.

"In this task we seek to understand Jesus and follow Him."

The officers, comprising the executive board, are President, Vice President, Secretary, and Treasurer.

There is an Advisory Board composed of members of the faculty and from women of the community. In addition there is a cabinet, whose duty it is to initiate and promote a program of activities that will best carry out the purpose of the organization.

Particularly outstanding has been the work of the Social Service Committee in securing contributions of clothes and offering other services for local welfare agencies; in enlisting the volunteer services of the students for play ground work at Wright's Refuge; and in connection with the Duke Hospital and Legal Aid Clinic. The Social Committee has attempted to provide an adequate social life including a novelty series of "charm-school" programs. The Industrial and Interracial committees have sought to supplant ignorance and prejudice by an intelligent, understanding attitude toward peoples and problems.

THE primary reason for the existence of the Y. W. C. A. on the over-organized, activity-minded campuses of today is that it is a voluntary religious movement. We are reminded that our lives, which we would live fully, are not very simple any more. We live in a complex world and we are a real part of the whole process of continual change which is the life of the world.

It is only in a religious movement that we are able to look at life in its entirety. It is not possible for us to escape the complexities of our age, not even when we are students. We are forced to live affected by and affecting the lives of millions of men and women daily. Is it possible to live creatively except as we sense in a real way our relation to these complex patterns and currents and put ourselves in tune with the rhythm of life? The primary functions, then, of the Christian Association is to discover through study and insight the values inherent in religion and to make them effective in all our human relationships.

THE Nereidian Club was founded in the spring of 1930 for the promotion of better swimming among the women of Duke University. This is an honorary organization and membership is based on ability in swimming, which is determined by various tests of strokes, dives and speed. The members of the club are the sole participants in the swimming meets given in coöperation with the Women's Athletic Association. In the spring and fall of each year, the Nereidians sponsor a traditional water pageant to which all the student body is invited. This year the club was honored by an exhibition given by Miss Helen Wainright Stellings, the national olympic star. In order to determine those worthy of membership, various tryouts are given in the spring and fall of each year. Each potential member is judged by ten or more members of the club and two faculty members. Then grades are averaged and the new Nereid is voted upon by the club in regard to ability in swimming and personal factors. The pageant of 1934 was based on an Hawaiian Theme with corresponding music and singing. The club afterwards held an open swim for the boys' swimming team and other friends.

The colors of the club, red, gold and blue, are embodied in the head of a Devilfish, which is the emblem worn on the suit of each member.

THE Women's Athletic Association was founded in the Spring of 1929. Its membership has increased, during these five years, to such an extent that it is now one of the leading campus organizations. The Association now has over three hundred members.

The three greatest incentives in promoting interest in athletics are the field days which are held in the Fall, Winter, and Spring, the awarding of letters, numerals, and sweaters, and the athletic cabin.

In the Fall Field Day, events in hockey, soccer, swimming, and riding are held; basketball and volleyball tournaments are held during the Winter; and the final athletic events, tennis, archery, baseball, and track, are held in the Spring.

A point system for giving awards has been established. To the fifteen girls who have the most points in each class, class numerals are awarded. A block "D" goes to each of the ten girls who have the most points, regardless of class. Old English "D's" are given to the six Junior girls having the most points at the end of the year. These girls comprise the All-Duke Honorary Team. The class having the largest total of points for the year have their numerals placed on the banner which hangs in the gymnasium.

THE Trident Club was organized on the Duke campus in May of last year, for the purpose of entertaining visiting athletic teams and fostering student spirit on the campus.

The membership consists of the head cheerleader, one representative from each of the fraternities, and two representatives elected from among the non-fraternity men of the three upper-classes.

Its first year of existence has been outstandingly successful. The school spirit on the campus showed notable improvement this year, especially during the football season, during which the team had the strongest student backing ever shown at Duke.

The outstanding events with which it was connected this year were Homecoming Day—with unusual preparations for the Tennessee game which did much to make it a big success, and the Victory Ball, given early in December in honor of the football team, and which is to be continued as an annual event.

The club has received a great deal of favorable criticism on its first years work, particularly on the introduction of card stunts and other activities at football games, which add much to the spirit of the game and interest in it, among visitors as well as students.

Pi Mu Epsilon

PI MU EPSILON is a national honorary mathematics fraternity which was founded at Syracuse University in 1914. Since that time numerous other chapters have been installed in universities throughout the country. The Duke chapter, North Carolina Alpha, was established in 1932.

The purpose of Pi Mu Epsilon is to stimulate and further active interest in mathematics and the mathematical sciences. Its members are those among the graduates and undergraduates who have shown interest and abilities in the study of mathematics, and those among the faculty who have shown an active, sympathetic interest in that study.

Each year the local chapter brings to the campus a noted mathematics lecturer. Also, the chapter sponsors a series of lectures by its undergraduate members. At the end of the year a prize is awarded to the student who is adjudged to have presented the best discussion.

In the Fall of 1927 a group of women town students met with Mrs. Hazen Smith to consider an organization of those students who resided outside Southgate. Town students, outnumbering the approximately one hundred and forty resident students, were represented on the student council by one of their own number elected by the women's student body. Due to this unsatisfactory representation and the desire for a room on the campus, this group organized the Town Girls' Club. The president became the agent for town students on the council. There were monthly luncheons; the annual party honoring the May Court to which all the women were invited; participation and winning in stunt night. In 1928 the present club room in Carr Building was obtained.

Though custom plays a part, this organization of one-seventh of the women students follows no set program. Each May the high school seniors are entertained. Meetings held once a month often close with informal socials. During 1933-'34, the cabinet has executed a program of activities on the basis that friendliness evokes interest and action in a common cause, helping unify town students through loyalty and friendship and striving to institute a closer relationship between all women of the university.

THE Forum Club was established at the Woman's College of Duke University in 1927, with the purpose in view being the furtherance of interest in classical studies. The name of the club is significant in that the ancient forum or market place was a place for discussions.

Meetings of the club are held bimonthly for the consideration of topics pertaining to Greek and Latin. Informal talks are presented by members of the faculty and by students, followed by an open forum.

Those women students of Duke University who average a "B" for one year on a course in Greek or Latin are eligible to membership in the club, elections being made twice a year on this basis, at the beginning of each semester.

According to tradition, once a year the Forum Club entertains the Classical Club, the men's organization of a similar purpose, at a banquet. Here at an informal gathering the discussion is lively between members of the organizations.

THE Polity Club is an organization whose purposes and objectives are to create a greater interest in political, social, and economic life; to promote a better understanding of these divisions of human activity and the principles underlying them; and to encourage the development of a higher type of citizenship. In pursuance of the studies and activities of the club its members devote their attentions to current problems and conditions in both national, and international affairs. The club is affiliated with the International Relations Club, an organization sponsored by the Carnegie Endowment, which supplies these clubs with speakers, and literature dealing with the various current topics of importance.

Membership in the Polity Club is open only to Juniors and Seniors who have made a high scholastic average in courses in political science and history. The club was founded in 1928, and under the able guidance of its faculty members; namely, Dr. Robert S. Rankin, Dr. R. R. Wilson, Dr. J. Fred Rippy, and Mr. William Simpson; it has accomplished much during its period of existence on the campus.

Columbian Literary Society

FOUR score and eight years ago, in June 1846, a few students of Union Institute, the forerunner of Duke University, assembled to form a society whose purpose was to promote the interest of literary training, especially elocution, poetry, and fine arts. This action resulted in the birth of the Columbian Literary Society. A few years later, in 1851, the Hesperian Literary Society was organized. During the ensuing years, the life of literary work was stimulated enthusiastically by the rivalry between these two groups in debates and in oratorical contests.

Since the founding of the society, it is found that several of the early functions of the society have been taken over by other organizations which Columbia had started. Of primary importance is the part that the society, in conjunction with the Hesperian Society, played in establishing and supporting various publications. In 1881, The College Herald was begun by a group of the society. Later this was called in succession: The Trinity Chronicle and The Duke Chronicle. The Trinity Magazine, which was founded in the same year, became known as the Archive in 1887. Besides founding two publications, the society had its own distinct library of some thirty-five volumes in 1850. These books have been absorbed by the college library, and today one occasionally runs across an old book marked "Donated by the Columbian Literary Society."

Due to the disbandment of Hesperia in 1931, Columbia now is chiefly concerned with intercollegiate debating, parliamentary meetings, and oratorical contests. A Senator Simmons Medal has been awarded during the last few years. The Wiley Gray Medal was established at Trinity College in 1879 by Robert T. Gray, an able young lawyer and Methodist of Raleigh, N. C. It is a memorial in honor of his brother, Captain Samuel Wiley Gray, who was killed in Battle at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, July 2, 1863. In accordance with the wish of the donor, the medal has been given to the member of the Senior Class who made the best oration during the commencement of his graduation. During this period twenty-six winners have been Columbians, twenty-seven Hesperians.

Omicron Delta Kappa

OMICRON DELTA KAPPA, a national collegiate honorary fraternity, was founded at Washington and Lee University, December 3, 1914. Since that date the organization has advanced until today there are 37 established circles in Universities throughout the United States.

The Rho Circle at Duke University was established in 1926, the initiates today numbering 216. Since its introduction on the campus, this organization has made tremendous strides; its qualifications of membership, being of the highest, has led it to a place of predominance in its particular field. The fact that it is a permanent custom of the organization to invite into membership prominent individuals in world affairs has brought added renown to the order. The membership today includes leaders in nearly every profession and business field, and the student leaders of the campus for the past seven years.

Built on a successful past, the future of all O. D. K. organizations, and especially of Rho Circle, is quite optimistic and the high standards to which it aspires can work to only one end.

Delta Phi Alpha has completed its second year of existence on the Duke campus. Having developed from the local German Club, which in the spring of 1931 lost its identity, it has attempted to perpetuate and to extend the ideals of that body. The organization is honorary, its membership comprising those students who have earned a minimum average of "B" through the second year of German or its equivalent, and who evidence an interest in the German language and particularly in German literature and culture. The basic purpose of the organization is precisely: to bring together such students, and, by providing them, through social means, with advantages denied them as individuals, to help them sustain and broaden their interest.

The colors of the organization are red, black, and gold. The key, bearing the coat-of-arms in three colors, is the complete emblem of the fraternity. The German eagle in gold is raised on a black background. In the center of the eagle's breast is a shield upon which the three Greek letters, ΔΦΑ, are engraved.

KAPPA DELTA PI, national honorary education fraternity, was founded at the University of Illinois in 1909.

The Illinois Education Club resolved to sponsor the founding of a national society with local chapters similar to its own organization. The club was successful in its endeavor, and today it is an international organization. Among the prominent names on its membership roll are those of John Dewey, W. C. Bagley, Dorothy Canfield, Alfred Wall-Quest, Richard E. Byrd, and many others.

The purpose of Kappa Delta Pi is to encourage in its members a higher degree of devotion to social service by maintaining the highest educational ideals, and by fostering fellowship, scholarship, and achievement in educational work. It attempts to maintain high standards of preparation for teaching, and to invite as members those who have attained excellence of scholarship and distinction of achievement as students and servants of education.

Alpha Tau chapter of Duke University was established May 28, 1927, growing out of a local education club known as Braxton Craven Educational Association.

Alpha Kappa Psi

ALPHA KAPPA PSI, a national professional commercial fraternity, was founded at New York University in 1905. At present there are fifty chapters installed in leading universities throughout the country. The aims of the fraternity are not only to further the individual welfare of its members but to encourage interest in the fields of commerce, accounts, and finance. The Diary of Alpha Kappa Psi is the official periodical, which devotes itself to fraternity, commerce, and college interests. This publication, which is issued four times during the school year, contains many educational items concerning current business problems written by both active and alumni members.

Beta Eta chapter was established at Duke University in December of the year 1927, to establish at Duke a recognized national commercial fraternity.

Each year Alpha Kappa Psi extends a membership to those students of the upper three classes pursuing studies in Business Administration who have shown their ability in this field, and who have proven their right to a recognition through business activities on the campus.

Delta Phi Rho Alpha

DELTA PHI RHO ALPHA is a local honorary athletic sorority which was created as a sister organization to Tombs, the athletic fraternity for men. This sorority was founded at old Trinity College in 1921, and has become one of the traditions of the campus. The purpose of the organization is the fostering of school spirit, leadership, clean sportsmanship, and the promotion of interest in athletics on the campus.

Every year, seven new members are chosen after consideration of leadership and athletic ability. Annually, these pledges appear in the traditional "goat" costume, a middy blouse, cotton hose, and tennis shoes, and carrying the symbolic rolling pin with the Greek inscription ΔΦΡΑ.

This year, the sorority has sponsored a tennis tournament, presenting a silver cup to the winner. Each year, also, the sorority sponsors an interclass basketball tournament. A banner with the numerals of the winning team is the award.

Tombs

TOMBS, a local honorary athletic fraternity, was founded at Trinity College in 1905. Established primarily as an honorary athletic organization, Tombs has evolved into one of the most outstanding brotherhoods on the campus of Duke. In addition to fostering better relationship in sport between Duke and other universities, Tombs also endeavors to implant more firmly the traditions of old Trinity College and to create new ones for the rapidly growing Duke University. Each year the fraternity attempts to instill in the hearts of incoming Freshmen a certain reverence for all traditions of the past. Though there are on its rolls inscribed the names of many celebrities of Southern sports, the men who are invited to membership in Tombs are those who have not only been most skillful on the athletic field but also those who have exemplified the highest characteristics of leadership and sportsmanship.

It is with a feeling of pride that Tombs can answer to the cry of "overemphasis in sport" by pointing to the fact that among its members there are not only stellar athletes but men who lead the campus in government and scholarship as well.

Eko-L

EKO-L was founded at Trinity College in 1914 for the purpose of encouraging and rewarding women of the college who had attained a marked degree of scholastic achievement. Its establishment came as an answer to the demand for recognition of those who had reached a mark of excellence in their undergraduate work. It served supreme in this capacity for six years, at which time it was partially supplanted by the establishment of Phi Beta Kappa. Then Eko-L assumed a position similar to that of 9019 on the men's campus, in that both are local societies drawing their membership from the two upper classes.

The membership of Eko-L is quite selective, and it is recognized as a great honor to become a part of this society. Since the year of its founding it has maintained a high standard of leadership as well as scholarship on the Duke woman's campus, and it is duly proud of the record which has been made by those who have been deemed worthy of membership.

In past years this society has sponsored interesting and worthwhile contests throughout the schools of the state in the writing of short stories and poetry. These contests not only served as means of scholastic recognition, but they thereby advanced the interests of Trinity College and Duke University among the people of the state.

SANDALS is an honorary Sophomore organization which was first instituted in 1932 by the Student Council of the Woman's College Government. The twenty members who comprise it are selected at the end of their Freshman year on the basis of scholarship, leadership, and general attitude. It was created for the primary purpose of assisting the Student Government in carrying out its various activities. During Freshman Orientation Week, the members were especially helpful, and since then they have coöperated with the Social Standards Committee in keeping the Ark a recreational center on the East Campus. Their main project for this year was to further the improvement of the Ark and create an active interest in it. Under the leadership of the president, Helen Gray, the Sandals have created an important place for this group among the other organizations of the campus.

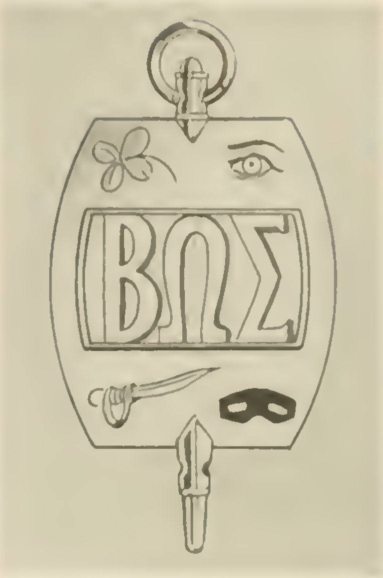
Beta Omega Sigma



BETA OMEGA SIGMA was founded at Trinity College with a twofold purpose, the first being to honor those Freshmen who succeed in extra-curricula activities, and the second to aid in furthering better school spirit. Part of the effort to create this spirit, which led to organizing the fraternity, included placing the responsibility of acquainting the Freshmen with campus traditions definitely upon some organization.

Beta Omega Sigma of the class of '36 feels that it has done the work expected of it. The fraternity did not attempt to coerce the Freshmen as has been its tendency in former years. Instead, the class of '37 was handled with consideration and tact, a policy which has brought much respect to Beta Omega Sigma.

Beta Omega Sigma greatly felt the loss of their fraternity adviser, Dean Arnold.

TOWARD the close of the last century, or to be exact, during the first of that decade termed "The Gay Nineties," a group of men at old Trinity wrote the Constitution and Ritual which are still the inspiration of the present members of the 9019 Society. At the time of its founding, 9019 was the only honor society on the campus, and in its club rooms in "The Old Inn" a number of men were initiated who later brought glory to Trinity through outstanding successes in many fields.

The pin of the fraternity is a gold circle, with a chalice and an arrow of gold superimposed. The figures of 9019, in black, are on the goblet. The colors of the organization are red and white. In keeping with the tradition established many years ago, only those men are considered to be eligible for election who are of excellent character and who have achieved distinction in scholarship during two years of study in Trinity College. The elections are held in the Fall and Spring of each year.

Washington's Birthday is celebrated as "9019 Day." This is a time when all old and new members come together for their annual banquet.

Iota Gamma Pi

IOTA GAMMA PI was founded in October, 1922, by a group of students in the scientific departments of Trinity College. Previous to this time there was no organization of any kind devoted primarily to the interests of students in the different scientific fields, and there was a feeling among a few interested students that there should be some society or group which would promote fraternal interests between men in the fields of science. They also desired to recognize scholarship and leadership in this work.

This fraternity is composed of about twenty or twenty-five men from the Junior and Senior classes of Trinity College who have excelled in scholarship and leadership and who are primarily interested in some branch of scientific study. At the bi-monthly meetings of the fraternity the students give talks and discuss the latest developments in their own fields of study. Through these meetings the members of the fraternity gain valuable knowledge concerning what is going on in other lines of work, and at the same time each student has an opportunity to discuss his own findings.

SIGMA UPSILON can hardly be called a secret organization. It is, in fact, a national literary fraternity which has for its aim the binding together of the college literary clubs and fraternities of the United States for the sake of mutual helpfulness. The membership is limited to twelve active undergraduate members in each chapter.

The primary motive of providing a reciprocating helpfulness is clearly discernible throughout all the phases of its organization and in its manner of birth.

On November 30, 1906, delegates from literary clubs already active on the campuses of four colleges, Sewanee, Vanderbilt University, Randolph-Macon, and the University of Georgia, met at Vanderbilt University. This meeting resulted in the foundation of the national literary fraternity which was given the Greek name Sigma Upsilon.

In 1913, The Fortnightly Club of Trinity College was given its charter as a chapter of Sigma Upsilon. The name Fortnightly was retained as the name of the chapter, and it is under this name that Sigma Upsilon exists on the campus of Duke University today.

CHI DELTA PHI, national honorary literary sorority, was founded in 1919 at the University of Tennessee. The purpose of the sorority is to bring together representative college women who, by their literary interest and creative ability, may uphold the higher ideals of a liberal education. The membership is unlimited in number, but restricted to upperclassmen.

There are at present thirty-eight chapters of Chi Delta Phi. The chapter at Duke was established in 1922, upon petition of its members. The publication of the sorority is the Litterateur, issued quarterly. The badge is a five-pointed star in blue, bearing on its face a lamp and the three Greek letters of the name in gold, the whole being surrounded by a gold or pearl circle, with a pair of quills across the pin beneath the star. The national colors are blue and gold; the flower is the pansy.

The national organization holds annual prose and poetry contests, entries being received from its own chapters and from those of Sigma Upsilon, a fraternity of purposes similar to those of Chi Delta Phi. The local chapter has endeavored to stimulate literary interest on the campus, honorary members of the sorority having addressed the organization. During the spring semester the chapter sponsored a poetry contest.

Membership in Phi Eta Sigma is a reward for those first-year men who show by their scholastic accomplishments that they have unusual intellectual ability. The aim of this fraternity is to stimulate in Freshmen an immediate desire to strive toward superior intellectual advancement.

Phi Eta Sigma was founded in 1923 by the late Doctor Arkle Clark, who was then Dean of the University of Illinois. It is the only national Freshman honorary fraternity, and now consists of thirty-four chapters situated in various universities of the United States. Every second year delegates from these chapters meet in a national convention at which reports are made and necessary business transacted.

The Duke chapter of Phi Eta Sigma was installed in 1932 through the efforts of the late Dean M. Arnold. Dean Arnold was the faculty adviser and an honorary member of Phi Eta Sigma. He was deeply interested in the fraternity and did everything possible to further its influence on the campus. The members of Phi Eta Sigma feel a great loss in the untimely death of their respected brother.

Tau Kappa Alpha

TAU KAPPA ALPHA, national honorary forensic fraternity, was founded at Indianapolis, Indiana, in the year 1908. Experiencing a consistent growth, the fraternity rapidly became popular.

With the installation of a chapter at Duke University, men outstanding in debating began to receive suitable recognition for their work. Tau Kappa Alpha, through the unquestioned merit of its limited membership, has come to hold a position of respect on the campus, and membership in the fraternity has become an ideal for which to strive.

Particularly, by their participation in intercollegiate debating some of the members of Tau Kappa Alpha have distinguished the school, the fraternity, and themselves. Tau Kappa Alpha is largely responsible for the attractive debating schedules which have been arranged from year to year. For the scholastic year 1933-34, the following schedule was arranged:

Home Debates: University of Alabama, University of Richmond, Emory and Henry, Yale University.

Trip Debates: University of Maryland, Washington and Lee University, Georgia School of Technology, Emory and Henry.

Although Tau Kappa Alpha has in the past years been more of a recognition order than anything else, it is the expressed purpose of this year's organization to make the society's status a more active one. A closer relationship with debating activity is planned through the executive control of a subsidiary in the process of formation. It is the hope that this will be the means of achieving that end so necessary and desired on this campus—the re-awakening of the somewhat latent interest in debate that was so alive a few years ago.

THE belief that the best interests of Greek-letter fraternities at Duke University, with respect both to our individual chapters and to our general organizations, would be fostered by the organization and functioning of a body of duly constituted representatives from the various active chapters in Duke, was the basis for the organization of the Pan-Hellenic Council.

The Pan-Hellenic Council, the governing body of inter-fraternity activities, which promotes interfraternity relations on a wholesome basis of unity and agreement, is composed of one representative from each of the national fraternities and one representative from each local fraternity. These men are selected by their various groups at the beginning of their Junior year, and serve as associates. The following year they automatically succeed their Senior representatives.

This year the council inaugurated the deferred rushing of the freshmen, and this system will in all probability be continued.

The Pan-Hellenic Council serves as a common meeting ground on which the various problems of the different fraternities are brought up and discussed. The council makes and enforces rules concerning rushing, pledging, and initiation of all men.

THE Pan-Hellenic Council, the governing body of intersorority activities, is composed of two representatives from each of the ten sororities. These girls are selected by their respective groups. Officers on the council rotate from year to year thus avoiding unnecessary rivalry. The Council makes and enforces rules concerning rushing, pledging, and initiation of all girls.

At the end of last year the Council formulated new rushing rules which were put into practice this year. A few changes were made in the old Constitution and new Constitutions were printed.

A scholarship cup is awarded semi-annually to the sorority having the highest average for the preceding semester.

As a project for the year the Council has been working on a plan whereby a scholarship shall be awarded each year to a girl for outstanding scholarship.

A new sorority, Delta Epsilon, has joined the Council this year, and Nu Beta Phi, a local sorority, has become affiliated with Alpha Epsilon Phi, a national sorority.

ALPHA TAU OMEGA was the first fraternity established after the Civil War. Founded at Richmond, Virginia, by three young Confederate soldiers, it was projected as a national organization which should know no sectional bounds, and the first chapter placed at Virginia Military Institute.

The fraternity now extends among college groups in forty-four states, and was the first to maintain successfully chapters in the North.

The first fraternity to become incorporated, it was granted a charter in 1879 by the Supreme Court of Maryland, at the instance of the fraternity members assembled in Congress at Baltimore. A. T. O. has been a member of the Inter-fraternity Conference since the initial 1909 meeting of that body.

Xi chapter is the oldest fraternity on Duke campus. It was the ninth Alpha Tau Omega chapter to be established, and is now fourth oldest in the order of existing ones. Originally North Carolina Alpha chapter, the name was changed to Xi in 1890, at the end of the anti-fraternity period at Trinity.

THE University of Virginia campus was the scene for the founding of Kappa Sigma. The founders are known in its literature and traditions as "the five friends and brothers." During the first years the members were noted for high social status in the South. Kappa Sigma was the first southern fraternity to attempt northern expansion. There are now chapters in forty-five states and one in Canada.

Kappa Sigma at first followed a policy of direct establishment of chapters, and it was nearly fourteen years before a chapter was established from a local society.

The fraternity maintains funds for keeping in close touch with individuals and chapters. Scholarship is stressed. The patriotic sense is embodied in the fraternal order, and each chapter displays an American flag.

Eta Prime of Kappa Sigma ranks second on the campus in point of age. It also has the distinction of being the third Kappa Sigma chapter. Since the establishment of an intramural sports department here, the Duke Kappa Sigs have been outstanding.

THE founding of Phi Delta Theta was at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, the fraternity being one of the members of the celebrated "Triad." At present Phi Delta Theta has about the largest number of initiates and the widest Canadian expansion of any fraternity.

It was intended in the beginning that the fraternity was to extend to other institutions, and this policy was entered upon forthwith. Before the opening of the Civil War a sound foundation for growth had been laid, although the hostilities checked further development.

In the history of Phi Delta Theta is the only instance of bicameral fraternity chapters. This was an exigency of the sub rosa nature of the chapters at anti-fraternity institutions.

North Carolina Alpha chapter, the third oldest national fraternity at Duke, has had two periods of existence. The first ended in 1879 when all fraternities were banned at Trinity. The second period began when the local body, Epsilon Alpha Sigma, was granted a charter and the original name.

THE Southern Order of Kappa Alpha, in contradistinction to the smaller fraternity of that name which exists principally in the North, was founded at Washington College, before that institution became Washington and Lee University.

The aim of the founders was to preserve the basic southern characteristics, other than sectional, in a fraternity confined to the southern states. The three chapters in California form the main exception to this principle. As far as individual membership is concerned, statehood is not a restriction. Indeed, the alumni associations are nation-wide in scope.

Kappa Alpha was not so fortunate in its infancy as some other fraternal organizations; for at many institutions where chapters were placed, anti-fraternity legislation shortly went into effect. Thus, it was left to a small nucleus of chapters working together to effect its permanent organization.

Alpha Phi chapter is the fourth oldest fraternity group on Duke campus. It was organized soon after the edict against fraternities here was repealed by the Trinity College board of trustees.

PI KAPPA ALPHA fraternity, founded at the University of Virginia, was the outcome of the close friendship of five men who served together in the Confederate Army, notably in the battle of New Market.

The initial chapter was the governing authority for some years, granting charters, installing chapters, and determining policies. The Pi Kappa Alpha convention of 1889 limited expansion to the southern states, so as to further a concentrated development. Later the field was opened to include the southwestern states, and has since been broadened to permit growth throughout the United States.

One of the chapters possesses a unique meeting place. It is a replica of a Pueblo Indian council chamber and is located on the University of New Mexico campus, only initiates being permitted entrance.

Pi Kappa Alpha has an intricate organization which extands even to the individual member and pledge, including a uniform pledging ceremony, a form examination, and numerous awards. Alpha Alpha chapter is fifth in age among fraternities at Duke.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON fraternity was founded at Richmond College, now the University of Richmond, from a local society called the Saturday Night Club. During its first two years the parent chapter encountered a great deal of opposition, both sarcastic and even directly hostile in character, from members of the college community. The fraternity, however, has managed to survive and to grow rapidly, until now its scope is nation-wide.

The early chapters were formed for the express purpose of joining S. P. E. The granting of charters to local petitioning bodies has been the most frequent method of inception for the later chapters.

A remarkable innovation is the "Sigma Phi Epsilon Plan of Finance." Under this system the financial affairs of all the chapters are administered by their alumni. It has relieved the undergraduate of a considerable burden and has proved profitable in cases where there had previously been loss.

North Carolina Gamma chapter, sixth in age of nationals here, was installed from the local group, Beta Nu.

SIGMA CHI is a member of the "Miami Triad" of national social fraternities that found origin at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio. Within six months after the mother chapter was first organized, a second chapter of Sigma Chi was brought into being at Ohio Wesleyan. The fraternity was incorporated in 1899 under the laws of Illinois as "The Grand Council of the Sigma Chi Fraternity." Its expansion throughout the United States has been effected mostly through the granting of charters to petitioning groups.

The Magazine of Sigma Chi has gradually developed from a local journal (1881) into the publication of all the chapters, edited several times a year.

Phenomenal in fraternity histories was the "Constantine chapter," composed of Sigma Chis serving in the Army of the Tennessee, having for institution the Confederate Army and for fraternal meeting-place the battlefield.

Beta Lambda is seventh in age among the chapters of national fraternities at Duke. It was the sixty-eighth group to be chartered by Sigma Chi.

THE only national ever founded in the State of South Carolina, Pi Kappa Phi began its existence at the College of Charleston. Up to 1927, when anti-fraternity statutes were stricken from the body of state legislation, Pi Kappa Phi was faced with the stern opposition to fraternities which was the feeling among the educational institutions in South Carolina for about thirty years.

Now, with the changed attitude, Pi Kappa Phi has made rapid headway in its mother state. It has had a steady and consistent growth outside. This has been more pronounced in the South, though not by intention. Membership in Pi Kappa Phi is limited to initiates, there being no honorary members.

It is interesting to note that its three founders were all warm friends from earliest school years in old Charleston. Their desire was to clothe their friendship in permanence, and so thereupon established this fraternity.

Mu chapter at Duke ranks eighth in age among the national groups on the campus.

THE College of the City of New York was the founding-place of Delta Sigma Phi fraternity, an order of not yet thirty-five years' existence. The fraternity has had a substantial development, although its policy of expansion has been conservative.

Since 1906 Delta Sigma Phi has been extended for the most part through the admittance of local groups by charter. Some of these had been well established organizations even before giving up their local identity. It is noteworthy that the Alfred University group had been started in 1901 as the Ku Klux Klan.

Though place names were given the chapters as they were admitted up to 1906, the Greek letter nomenclature was adopted then with one exception. This is the Hilgard chapter at the University of California, so designated because of the profound respect in which its chief patron's name is held.

Alpha Epsilon of Duke is the ninth oldest national on the campus. It has as faculty adviser the director of dramatics, A. T. West.

SOMEWHAT unusual was the origin of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity. It was founded at Boston University, growing out of the Cosmopolitan Law Club, which had been active there for several years. It was made a Greek-letter society with a view to national expansion.

The fraternity did not establish further chapters, however, for more than two years, and when expansion did take place a great many of the new chapters were formed from existing clubs. The former clubs were augmented by the granting of Lambda Chi Alpha charters to petitioning groups.

Lambda Chi has had a remarkable growth, no chapter, up to 1930 at least, having become permanently inactive. There are chapters now in thirty-eight states of the Union, and with the establishment of a Toronto chapter in 1927, the fraternity became international. Lambda Chi is a charter member of the Inter-fraternity Conference.

Gamma Theta Zeta chapter is tenth in age among Duke fraternities. Before 1924 it was the local fraternity by name Beta Pi.

THE Rainbow or W. W. W. society was founded in 1848 at the University of Mississippi. It was about ten years later that the parent chapter of Delta Tau Delta was organized at Bethany College, within the present limits of West Virginia. After lengthy negotiations the Rainbow fraternity in 1886 united with Delta Tau Delta. By this union the Rainbow chapters were entitled to membership in the Greek-letter order, though there is a distinction between these and the duly invested Delt chapters.

This merging of national groups is unique in fraternity annals. The Rainbow, because of greater age and different characteristics, was a valuable initiate into the conventional fraternity, and in truth members of the latter may well trace their fraternal lineage from both sources.

Delta Tau Delta exists in all parts of the country and has expanded into Canada.

The Duke chapter, Delta Kappa, is between five and six years old. In all of the Delt chapters a periodical is published at least once a year.

EIGHT students at the University of Alabama were the founders of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. From this first chapter, which was given the name Mu, the fraternity has had rapid and constant growth. S. A. E. now exists in forty-six states.

The wartime history of Sigma Alpha Epsilon is of absorbing interest. When the Civil War came, whole chapters, and parts of others, went into service, there being members in both armies. A Kentucky girl who kept intact the documents of one of the chapters during the war period, was rewarded with membership and the distinction of being the fraternity's only woman member.

The World War battlefield was the scene of two S. A. E. initiation ceremonies, one in a German castle and another in a French chateau; and alumni associations were also formed on the Continent.

North Carolina Nu chapter, when it came into existence three years ago, was formed from the local club, Psi Delta Sigma. The S. A. E.'s won the intramural plaque in 1932 and in 1933.

SIGMA NU fraternity grew out of a secret society established at Virginia Military Institute in 1868, called the Legion of Honor. The Greek letter designated and other college fraternity characteristics were adopted on January 1st of the very next year, the official date of founding of Sigma Nu by three western men, but without sectional discrimination.

The Delta was so named because of the triangular relationship between the Alpha, Kappa, and Lambda chapters who collaborated in publishing it first in 1883. The official fraternity song is the recently written "White Star of Sigma Nu."

Sigma Nu has active chapters in all the forty-eight states. Early in its history growth was stimulated in the West, and the East was later exploited.

The original Gamma chapter having ceased to exist, the Duke group, formerly the local "Goblins," were formally installed as Gamma chapter of Sigma Nu. Bearing the name of the third oldest chapter of their fraternity, the Sigma Nus are the newest national on Duke campus.

PI EPSILON PI fraternity was established here in the spring of 1926. It is a local organization, but will in all probability form part of a national social fraternity before much time has elapsed. The members have been directing their attention to petitioning Phi Gamma Delta.

As a group on the campus, the members of Pi Epsilon Pi have always stood well, both in strength of organization and in the accomplishment of individuals. It may well be said that this fraternity has contributed a worthwhile share to the life of the University.

In the course of the eight years during which Pi Epsilon Pi has existed at Duke, there have been 125 men initiated into the group. The fraternity has remained relatively small and compact, though its members have participated in varied campus activities.

The main phases of campus life in which Pi Epsilon Pi has had leaders have been athletics, publications, and student government.

The fraternity adviser from the faculty is Dr. Bert Cunningham.

Sigma Delta founded	Spring of 1928

THE organization of Sigma Delta fraternity was effected in the spring of the year 1928. The men who founded the society had for purpose the molding of a strong local group that would later become part of a national social fraternity.

Toward this end an informal petition was presented, July, 1932, to Phi Kappa Psi fraternity. The meeting of the Grand Arch Council of Phi Kappa Psi is set for July of this year. At that time Sigma Delta will engage in a formal petitioning.

The policy of Sigma Delta has been conservatism in numbers, in the belief that a small group having the character of congeniality may go farther in beneficial development than can a large unwieldy body. During its existence the fraternity has maintained a creditable standing in the life of the University, having contributed its share of outstanding men.

In the six years of its existence Sigma Delta has initiated approximately seventy men. The fraternity has as faculty adviser Dr. Robert S. Rankin.

S. A. O. founded	September, 1928

IN the fall of 1928 the local fraternity, Sigma Alpha Omega, was established here. The thirteen original members founded the organization with the intent of joining ultimately a national group.

The first idea which the S. A. O.'s had in mind was a petition for a charter. There ensued informal dealings with several national fraternities before it was decided finally to petition directly to Phi Kappa Sigma.

Phi Kappa Sigma has responded with interest, and a rather unusual plan is being followed—that of colonization. Colonization is a conservative and gradual process, but there is a strong basis for the belief that Sigma Alpha Omega will become a chapter of Phi Kappa Sigma before very long. Through the coöperation of Lambda chapter, at the University of North Carolina, already eight members of S. A. O. have been initiated into the national society.

Sigma Alpha Omega has made a very commendable showing on the campus since its beginning. During this time forty-six men have been initiated into the local order.

THE Keys Club is the youngest social body on the campus. The society was organized in 1932 by a group of first-year men with the assistance of the late Dean Moxley Arnold. Almost immediately the organization swung into prominence through its members, who have been quite industrious and outstanding in life on the campus.

Taking up their quarters on the first floor of H dormitory, where were also located Dean Arnold's rooms, the Keys Club members spent their first year in close relationship with the late dean of freshmen paralleled only by his own fraternity connection.

The Keys Club is not a fraternity in the strictly accepted sense, for it does not bear a Greek-letter designation and the other characteristics which mark the distinction between a fraternal order and a society of which Keys is exemplary.

The first step, however, has been made toward founding another fraternity on the campus. The Keys members are already directing their efforts toward securing chapterhood in Beta Theta Pi.

ALPHA DELTA PI, one of the largest and oldest national sororities, was originally the Adelphean Society, founded May 15, 1851, at Wesleyan College, Macon, Georgia. The Adelphean Society, being the first secret society for women, founded at the first college for women, holds an important place in the early development of national sororities. The members of Alpha Chapter applied for a charter and the Society became nationally known as Alpha Delta Phi. This name was later changed to avoid any misunderstanding regarding a fraternity existing under the same name. As Alpha Delta Pi it has grown and expanded throughout the United States, and it became international with the installation of several chapters in Canada.

The Adelphean, the national publication, is issued quarterly.

Omicron chapter of Alpha Delta Pi has the distinction of being the first sorority on the Duke campus. It was installed in 1911 when Duke was known as Trinity College and has developed and expanded with the school. Since its installation approximately two hundred girls have been initiated into Alpha Delta Pi by Omicron.

KAPPA DELTA Sorority was founded by four girls at Virginia State Normal, Farmville, Virginia, on October 23, 1897. Through the personal friendships of these girls with girls in other colleges, new chapters were added to the organization very rapidly. The first convention was held in Richmond, Virginia, in 1904, at which six chapters were represented. Since that time the Society has established chapters throughout the United States.

The journal of Kappa Delta is the Angelos, which was first published in 1904.

Virginia is the center of Kappa Delta philanthropic projects because it is the state of the sorority's founding. In Richmond, Virginia, the national organization maintains a ward, a dental room, and a gymnasium in the Richmond Crippled Children's Hospital. Aside from this, individual chapters of Kappa Delta carry on community charitable work.

Sigma Delta of Kappa Delta was installed at Trinity College, now Duke University, on April 19, 1912, by two members of the National Council, Misses Cora Vaughn and Jean Coltrone. Kappa Delta was the second sorority to be installed on the Trinity College campus, and since that time the chapter has remained active and has grown steadily.

ZETA TAU ALPHA was founded at Virginia State Normal School, Farmville, Virginia, on October 15, 1898. For several months after its founding it was known as the ??? (The Three Question Mark Girls). Before April, 1899, the Greek name was adopted, and on March 15, 1902, Zeta Tau Alpha was chartered as a legal corporation by the legislature of Virginia. Thus it was not only the first women's fraternity to be chartered in the state of Virginia, but the first chartered by a special act of the legislature.

Northern sororities had, by the end of the nineteenth century, become well established, but the southern field was left practically open. Zeta Tau Alpha was one of the first sororities to fill this need of organization in the South, and for several years continued its expansion in the Southern States. The first northern chapter was started at Boston University, February 22, 1912. Zeta Tau Alpha became international in 1929 with the installation of Beta Rho Chapter at the University of Manitoba, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada.

The magazine of Zeta Tau Alpha, Themis, is published quarterly, and was first issued in 1903.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA, the first Greek letter fraternity known among women, was founded at DePauw University, then Asbury College, at Greencastle, Indiana, 1870. Although at that time there were three other women's fraternities in existence, these did not adopt Greek letter names until somewhat later. Kappa Alpha Theta was founded in a co-educational institution where the same needs which led to the establishment of Greek letter societies among men were felt by the women; therefore, Theta was the first society for women organized with principles and methods akin to those of the Greek letter fraternities.

The magazine, the Kappa Alpha Theta, is published quarterly, the first issue being in 1885.

In 1925 a local, Sigma Tau, was formed, which petitioned Kappa Alpha Theta. In 1928, the petition was accepted and Sigma Tau was installed as Beta Rho chapter of Kappa Alpha Theta. Since 1928 Beta Rho has initiated approximately one hundred girls into Kappa Alpha Theta, and has always maintained a high standard both scholastically and socially on the Duke University Campus.

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA is one of the oldest of the Greek letter sororities. It was founded at Monmouth College, Monmouth, Illinois, in 1870. Kappa was the first sorority to call a Pan-Hellenic Congress, to hold a national convention, to institute a central form of government, to publish a sorority magazine, to form a uniform budget system, and to send co-organizers to assist new chapters. A complete history of Kappa Kappa Gamma was presented to the national convention of 1930.

The Key, a quarterly publication, contains news-letters from all active chapters, and discussions of sorority problems and events, both national and local.

Kappa maintains two funds—one set aside to assist needy Kappas; the other, to give deserving students an opportunity to complete their education.

In 1928 a local sorority, Sigma Beta, was organized on the Duke University campus with the express purpose of petitioning Kappa Kappa Gamma. The official petition was submitted in March, 1930, and in October 25, of the same year, Sigma Beta became Delta Beta Chapter of Kappa Kappa Gamma.

SIGMA KAPPA stands among the pioneer Greek letter societies for women. It was founded in 1874 at Colby College, Waterville, Maine, by the first five women enrolled there, and became a member of National Pan-Hellenic Congress in 1904. Since that time, Sigma Kappa has become international, having chapters located in Canada.

The chief publication of the sorority is the Triangle, a quarterly magazine issued first in 1907, giving a full account of Sigma Kappa activities and interesting personalities.

In 1918 Sigma Kappa adopted as its national philanthropy the educational work of the Maine Sea Coast Missionary Society. This work is centered among the fisherfolk on the many small islands off the New England coast.

In 1922 a scholarship fund was established for the purpose of aiding members of Sigma Kappa to complete college courses. As an incentive to encourage high scholarship, a national committee makes an annual award of a scholarship cup to the chapter having the best record.

The local sorority, Delta Psi, was organized in February, 1929, with the purpose of petitioning Sigma Kappa for a charter. The petition was accepted in December, 1930, and on January 4, 1931, Delta Psi was installed as Alpha Psi Chapter of Sigma Kappa.

Delta Delta Delta was founded at Boston University on Thanksgiving Eve, 1899. Tri Delta has never been a sectional organization. Founded in the East, its first charters were distributed over all sections of this country and three chapters were established in Canada. Tri Delta has alumnae chapters in all of the larger cities.

Delta Delta Delta was one of the six sororities represented at the first Pan-Hellenic Congress, which was held in 1891. In the first history of the sorority, published in 1907, there was a chapter devoted to the first development of the Pan-Hellenic movement.

The other publications of Delta Delta Delta include the quarterly magazine, the Trident, published since 1891. A song book and various secret publications are also issued.

Delta Delta Delta accepted the petition of a local, Delta Upsilon, formed on the Duke University campus, and Alpha Omicron was installed November 7, 1931. Since that time the sorority has grown in membership and prestige. The excellent work of the chapter in the past bespeaks of a successful future.

Pi Beta Phi, the oldest national fraternity for women, was founded April 28, 1867, at Monmouth College, Monmouth, Illinois, under the name I. C. Sorosis. In 1883 the Greek name was adopted as a sub-title. Five years later, the name I. C. Sorosis was discontinued, and in 1889 the fraternity was incorporated under the state laws of Illinois as Pi Beta Phi.

The journal of Pi Beta Phi, the Arrow, which was first printed in 1885, is published quarterly. As an encouragement for high scholarship, the fraternity maintains a number of scholarships and fellowships for its members.

North Carolina Beta of Pi Beta Phi had its origin in the local sorority, Mu Lambda, founded April 22, 1929. The purpose of the founders of Mu Lambda was to obtain a charter of Pi Beta Phi, and to this end they persevered, refusing unsolicited offers of charters from other national fraternities. A formal petition was presented to Pi Beta Phi on January 14, 1933. On February 17, 1933, Miss Amy Burnham Onken, National Grand President of Pi Beta Phi, formally installed Mu Lambda as North Carolina Beta.

Alpha Epsilon Phi

ALPHA EPSILON PHI was founded at Barnard College on October 24, 1909. It has the distinction of being the oldest and largest Jewish sorority in existence, having chapters in both the United States and Canada. Scholarship, citizenship, and service are among the ideals stressed in chapter life by Alpha Epsilon Phi.

The chief publication of the sorority is the Columns of Alpha Epsilon Phi.

The national organization has several philanthropic endeavors, and also has several diversified scholarships for members on campuses where chapters are located.

Alpha Epsilon Phi accepted the petition of the local sorority, Nu Beta Phi, and Alpha Epsilon Chapter was installed in 1934 on the Duke campus.

The Chanticleer

The Chanticleer has been published annually for a great many years. It was first the attempt of the editorial staff to portray the student life of old Trinity College between its covers. With the transition from Trinity College into Duke University a new demand was placed upon the Chanticleer, if it was to adequately depict the greatly expended life of the Duke campus. To fit this demand, a larger book was needed. The staff of nineteen hundred and thirty-three met this need. It has been the attempt of the present staff to use that size as a basis of work and create a book that would catch and present the beauty and symmetry of our surroundings, one that would be a suitable monument to the class of nineteen hundred and thirty-four.

This book is primarily attempting to please the present Senior class, for it is the annual of their graduating year. As the dreams of completing their undergraduate college career approach reality, their attention will be focused more and more on the business life that lies ahead—in the future. Slowly will they forget the joys and sorrows, some of the friendships formed, and the activities engaged in while at Duke.

THE business staff this year has accomplished a splendid and enormous task. It has always been a difficult job to obtain advertisements to sustain the financial end of an annual and a likewise painful task to carry out collections of the various student fees. Their task was however increased this year by the enlargement of the book with the corresponding increase of space to fill, in regard to advertisements and a greater responsibility of student collection. With the coöperation of the East campus division of the staff, it has been carried to a successful conclusion.

Back of this machine there must be principles which will bear mention at this point. We have worked to catch the spirit of beauty, of silent strength, of subdued power, of consolidation of lofty ideas all inherent in the walls of our university buildings. Things can be beautiful and shallow; shallowness can exist without beauty. Both of these are easily portrayed, but to do justice to a rich and meaning beauty is a difficult task. Simplicity, minuteness of design, good taste, and attention to details have made possible the presentation of the book to the students in this form. If the majority are pleased with the outcome of the staffs' endeavors, that is all one can ask.

The Duke Chronicle

THE Duke Chronicle, the University weekly newspaper, is now in its twenty-eighth year. The editorial policy for 1933-34 has centered around four major points: (1) Development of University Atmosphere, (2) Betterment of Student-Faculty Relationships, (3) Creation of Duke Spirit, (4) Coöperation Among Organizations.

In an attempt to prepare for the long-hoped-for change from weekly to semi-weekly publications, the editor has enlarged the editorial staff and created new departments. The West and East campus staffs report news from Trinity College and the Women's College respectively.

The Duke Chronicle has increased its circulation in accordance with the increased enrollment of the University through the close coöperation of the editorial and business staffs. We should feel quite proud of the fine record they have made, not only in their increased circulation, but also in the splendid weekly papers they have been publishing.

The Duke Chronicle

IN keeping with the continual growth of Duke University, the business staff of the Duke Chronicle has greatly increased the number of workers who by consistent application have built up one of the best papers in the school's history. The business staff should be proud of the showing they have made this year.

The staff has built up a paid circulation of over three thousand copies and can boast of complete Duke University coverage. The advertisements, which are the principal source of income, have been increased this year by over thirty-five per cent of last year's fine record. By the great efficiency of the staff in regard to procuring ads, the number of pages has been increased to between ten and twelve.

With the increasing number of workers, competition has been keener for positions on the staff and this has caused greater interest and more efficiency among the staff members which has resulted in the publication of an excellent paper.

The Archive

At the end of its forty-sixth year of continuous publication, the Archive is far from the large, voluminous product which once served simultaneously as newspaper, literary magazine, and annual. Corresponding with the increase in the size of the school, there has ensued a new and better Archive, published monthly by the students and devoted primarily to a soliciting and printing of the best literary creation of the entire student body. There are no restrictions in regard to the class status of the contributions, every member of the college community being extended an opportunity to have his work published.

Recent editors have done much to obtain the writings of many of the nation's outstanding literary figures. Reversing this policy, we find the 1934 magazine the culmination of the idea of elimination of all outside contribution. By enacting this change, it is felt that the Archive is now a truly student publication. One cannot help but feel an increased interest in contributions when they are of friend or acquaintance. The policy adopted has worked efficiently, and so far has in no way lowered the standard of the magazine. The students thus acting as their own patterns have stimulated creative ability.

The Archive

THE fact that the Archive has been awarded first place for the last four years over all other collegiate magazines represented in the North Carolina Press Association is adequate proof that the work of the staff has not been in vain. This is an unparalleled achievement and should be regarded as significant in the decided advance which the publication has made since its founding in 1888.

This year there has been closer coöperation between the business and editorial staffs. Contributions have been entered from both campuses; however, more than one-half of this year's material has been submitted by women. This has been the result of encouragement and a greater chance for advancement of women who wish to try out for staff positions and are literally inclined. Coördination with Sigma Upsilon, national literary fraternity, has also served to make the working of the magazine function more smoothly.

To the future editors, the exceptional record of the Archive should be kep. in mind, not only because of the acknowledged recognition that it brings both to the University and to themselves, but because it is a true indication of student work and student management.

THE Distaff, only publication of the Woman's College, has successfully completed its third year of activity. It was founded entirely through the interests and efforts of the women students who desired a magazine of their own. Through the efficiency of the students, the publication has been increased in size and quality of work. The main purposes of the paper is to promote interest in creative writing on the campus and to encourage literary efforts among the students.

Since it is a representative student publication, students are allowed to voice their own opinions. Any student is eligible for the staff who is willing to work diligently. Future members of the Distaff will have to work extra hard in order to keep up with the fine record made by this year's staff.

The Distaff came as an answer to the desire to achieve likewise leadership and individuality in publications: it was felt that promotion was not achieved in accordance with the effort expended and the urge to be their own directors in a strictly woman's publication, made up of strictly women workers and strictly women contributors, has been the stimulus which has kept this publication in the forefront paralleling the Archive in its scope of literary material.

THE Business Department of the Distaff, in the third year of its existence, has so well wrought and achieved that the continuance of the periodical is not only assured for the present but is guaranteed for the future as an integral part of Duke student publications. That their activities have been widespread and efficient is proven by the number and variety of advertisements carried this year. The leading merchants of Durham, through the untiring efforts of members of the Business Staff, have seen fit to patronize the book—a sure sign of the worth of the Distaff, not only as an encouragement for student creative writing but also as a good advertising medium.

This work has been an important part of the trend towards a field of independence and creative literary effort by the women as an equivalent to the publications of the men of Duke University. The results of the activities of the Business Staff have as effectively proven the business and administrative ability of the women as the efforts of the Editorial Staff have established their literary talents. No literary publication may exist without the foundation of a good business staff; thus the only publication of the Women's College is made possible by their efforts. The staff is due a great deal of credit for its work in the past and present, for it has strictly adhered to the general policy of the Distaff—it is entirely a product of women student effort; written, financed and published by them alone.

THREE years ago Taurian Players became Duke Players, and since that time the organization has made remarkable advancement in both the quantity and quality of their endeavors. Following last year's highly successful program, this year the Players continued their policy of three major and two minor productions. George Bernard Shaw's Great Catherine, with Anita Knox playing the title role, was presented on November third as the first major production. Lavish of costume and setting, this play was enthusiastically received by the largest audience ever to witness a Duke Players' production. Shortly before the Christmas holidays a unique feature of this year's program was presented in the form of a bill of original one-acts which included Stewart Bosley's Alternative, Gordon Clouser's Homecoming, A. T. West's adaption of Yereniev's Tragedy of the Soul, and Richard Austin Smith's Forgotten Temples. This feature has popularized playwriting on our campus, and it is hoped that even more interest in this literary form will be shown next year. For the Quadrangle Pictures Birthday Party the Players aided in scenery creation and technical production and presented Harry Willis' prize-winning skit, Author, Save My Child. On March twenty-third the second major production, Dangerous Corner—a modern mystery play by J. B. Priestley—was acclaimed as successful as Great Catherine. Dracula as adapted by John Bolderson from the novel of Bram Stoker produced by the Carolina Mummers of Chapel Hill, was sponsored by the Players as their fourth presentation, on April 20. Either Noel Conward's uproarous comedy Hay Fever or Philip Barry's Hotel Universe is to be given for the Player's traditional May Day offering. Both are in rehearsal at the present time, and the one that is not produced in May will be presented next year.

Tentative plans for the coming year are equally as enthusiastic as they were for this year's fruitful season. Among the plays being considered are: Cyrano de Bergerac by Rostand, Ah Wilderness by Eugene O'Neill, After Dark by Dion Boucicault and Androcles and the Lion by George Bernard Shaw.

Although many members of the club have done creditable work this year, there are three whose efforts are noteworthy—Mr. A. T. West, our director, Fred Hague, our business manager—and Harry Willis, who has proved more than once that his work in scenery designing and play-writing will be missed.

The increasing interest with which Duke students are entering into the field of dramatic art and the evidence of much real talent among this year's new members promise even greater success to the Players in the future.

Theta Alpha Phi

THETA ALPHA PHI, National Honorary Dramatic Fraternity, is an organization of thirty-six chapters representing twenty-nine states and one territory. It was organized at a meeting of the National Association of the Teachers of Speech held in Chicago, December, 1919. The purpose of the fraternity is to increase interest, stimulate creativeness, and foster artistic achievement in all or the allied crafts of the theatre. Membership is gained by meritorious work done in the field of the drama. On this campus, as well as on a greater majority of the other campuses where chapters are located, Theta Alpha Phi is a means of acknowledging the individual's faithful support of the dramatic organization and in some manner showing his superiority in one of the many phases of the theatre.

The official badge is a comico-tragic mask of gold crowned with four rubies bearing the black enameled letters "ΘΑΦ" on the left eye, nose, and right eye, respectively. The official publication is The Cue, of which Mr. A. T. West is an assistant editor and a very valuable contributor to the great success which this publication has enjoyed.

Men's Glee Club

THE Men's Glee Club is fast becoming one of the prominent organizations in the field of student activities at the University. The program for this year has suffered no curtailment. Starting the 1933-34 session with many of last year's accomplished singers, the squad was closely contested in all departments. Upon close examination one finds that even the seasoned veterans were hard pushed and often replaced by fresh talent.

During the week of March 5, the Duke University Musical Clubs, composed of the Men's Glee Club, the Concert Orchestra, Jelly Leftwich's University Club Orchestra, and Mrs. J. Foster Barnes as guest artist, made a tour of four cities in North Carolina, namely, Charlotte, Greensboro, Winston-Salem and High Point.

A similiar trip, on a somewhat smaller scale, was carried out in the fall. Under the capable leadership of J. Foster Barnes these trips have proven a success both to the club itself and to the school which they represent. The newspaper comments were quite favorable and the critics were unanimous in their praise of the balanced strength of the Club.

The Club, under its president, Turner Foster, has been active between its tours in aiding at gatherings, giving social functions and preparing short excursions.

THE Women's Glee Club, a part of the musical division of Trinity College, has continued to grow under the capable direction of Mrs. J. Foster Barnes until its membership has reached nearly one hundred.

This group has increased not only in size but also in activities. For the past several years the Glee Club has appeared in a musical concert on the East campus, and each spring has joined the Men's Glee Club in presenting an operetta in Page Auditorium. The Woman's Glee Club is also important in the Chapel Choir, which furnishes music for the Sunday services. This year the Glee Club, in collaboration with the other women's musical organizations, has gained further recognition by bringing the well-known Richard Halliburton to the campus in the fall, and the Carolina Salon Ensemble in the spring.

The formation of this club has given the women a chance to apply their musical talent and to progress accordingly with the growth of the musical organizations on the men's campus.

It is hard to carry out a well-rounded education without denoting a substantial proportion of one's time to the study or participation in the field of music. Today, as in the past, it adds color to work and play.

Women's Glee Club

Johnny Long's Duke Collegians

JOHNNY LONG and his Duke Collegians Orchestra is one of the Few successful coöperative orchestras in the country. Since its organization in the fall of 1931, this group of eleven musicians has progressed to such a position that it is making a definite bid for the title, "The South's Leading Collegian Orchestra."

In the past three years the orchestra has played many engagements at mid-southern Universities, among them being Washington and Lee, North Carolina State, Duke University, North Carolina University, Randolph-Macon and Hampton-Sidney; they have also played extensively throughout the Carolinas and Virginia, and have spent two successful seasons at White Lake Beach, popular North Carolina summer resort.

Let us glance back to find the history of this organization. The orchestra was organized in the fall of 1931 and has been fortunate in keeping the same personnel since that time. A constitution was drawn up which governs the conduct of the members; heavy fines for drinking and disorderly conduct are inflicted, and all personal disputes must be settled within twenty-four hours. At the time of organization, officers were elected, Maurice Miley being selected as manager of the orchestra, having in charge all business affairs and booking engagements throughout the school year.

From the beginning of Freshman week, in their Sophomore year, the band has been entertaining nightly in the Men's Union. They have continued to furnish music throughout the year, alternating each month between the East and West campuses. In their continued stages of progress, they have won innumerable supporters and the hearts of all the University students.

The Duke Collegians, because they have combined good music with showmanship without cheapening either, because their spirit of coöperation has carried them through consecutive years with but a single change, because they are not only fine musicians, but frequently take up the composer's pen with ability, because they have a fine spirit of fraternalism in their group, are worthy of distinction.

The Collegians pride themselves on their sweet music, their spirit of fraternalism, and on the fact that in their personnel there are six arrangers and six composers who have written and presented ten songs. The entire personnel consists of: John Long, James Allardice, Edwin Butner, Shelby Dale, Ogden Davies, David Goddard, McCarthy Hangar, Charles Hicks, Maurice Miley, Henry Miller and Irving Nielsen.

With such a unit to work with it does not require much imagination nor do we have to look far into the future to see Johnny Long and his orchestra follow the path of success which some of the more prominent dance orchestras of the country have traveled. We may with interest watch these boys graduate in the class of thirty-five. May the outside world from that point on welcome them and enjoy the same sweet music we hear.

Nick Laney and His Blue Devils

THE name "Blue Devils" has not been confined in its nationwide scope to the athletic teams representing Duke University; the name also tabs an orchestra that has become known throughout the South and Middle Atlantic States as one of the college world's most distinctive contributions to the ranks of dance bands. Duke students and alumni are proud of Nick Laney and his Blue Devil Orchestra.

The beginning of the band's rapid rise to fame began one evening back in 1931 when someone suggested that Nick Laney, then best known for his football playing, sing a few songs with the orchestra playing in the men's union after supper. The crowd liked his singing. The orchestra received national publicity when newspapers carried feature stories on the "croonin' halfback." The climax to the organization's early history arrived when it was selected from 150 college bands to play with Guy Lombardo in the Roosevelt Hotel, New York, during the Christmas vacation of 1932-33.

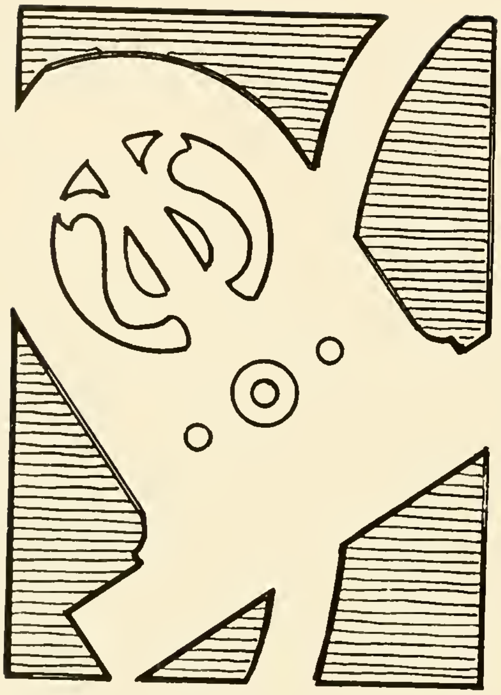
That engagement in the Gotham City marked the change from just another college orchestra to one of the finest in the country. Last year they played at the smart Mayview Manor, Blowing Rock, N. C. During the present academic year they have played for major social events at practically every large southern college. Among the campus events staged last semester, the Blue Devils were selected to play for the Pan-Hellenic Dance and the Co-ed Ball.

The personnel of the band is as follows: Bob Boyd, first sax; Les Brown, second sax and arranger; Paul Harwon, third sax; Bill Couch, fourth sax; Bob Thorne, first trumpet; Charles Higgins, second trumpet; Walton Moffet, trombone; Pete Laudeman, piano; Harry Ingle, drums; Ernest Barnham, guitar; Ray Couch, bass; Larry Turner, first violin; Jack Tannenbaum, second violin; and Nick Laney, leader.

It requires no stretch of imagination to predict a brilliant future for the Blue Devils and their versatile leader. They have as their model Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians, a top-rating orchestra that began in student days at Penn State. Nick plans to add four or five more musicians and develop the orchestra along the lines of the Waring unit. This summer their bookings will be handled by the Dixie Orchestra Service, Charlotte, N. C.

But no matter how high they climb in the music world we shall always remember them as "Nick and the boys" who set our feet beating time to a hot Casa Loma number or our minds wandering with the glide of a beautiful waltz.

Nick Laney, during his stay in the University, was very outstanding in the field of sports. It seems that on the basis of his progress thus far that success in the field of music is likewise assured. It is apparent that his untireing efforts will soon put him, as well as the boys, in a worthwhile position. They have made their bid for fame and it seems certain that opportunity will be continually knocking at their door.



ATHLETICS

Director of Athletics
Wallace Wade

Department of Athletics

WALLACE WADE, who assumed complete charge of athletics at Duke University in January, 1931, brought with him from Alabama one of the greatest records of American football coaches. And he has continued that record at Duke. His football teams of the past three seasons have added glory to his already prominent record in the football world.

Nineteen hundred and thirty-three added world renown to the name of Wallace Wade and to the Duke Blue Devils. This year's aggregation came through a tough ten-game schedule with flying colors. Outstanding as Southern Conference champions, they narrowly missed a trip to the elusive Rose Bowl through a heart-breaking upset at the hands of the Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets at Atlanta.

In addition to his duties as head football coach at Duke, Mr. Wade, as Athletic Director, has installed a greatly enlarged physical education program that includes a department of intramural athletics designed to furnish athletics for all students. In its two years of operation, a great percentage of Duke students have taken in some sort of athletic program.

His career as a coach is studded with brilliancy, beginning when he became head coach at a small school in Tennessee, where he attracted Dan McGugin's attention as an able handler of men, and consequently went to Vanderbilt as assistant to the latter. Two years later he went to Alabama and remained there through the 1930 season.

Wallace Wade was graduated from Brown University in the spring of 1917. Soon after his service in the World War he began that climb in the athletic world which has brought him to his present predominant position.

Up to the present Alabama has been the subject of his most successful efforts. Gaining Southern Conference championships in 1924, 1925 and 1926, in these last two years the Crimson Tide was also one of the contenders in the Rose Bowl classic. In 1930 the invitation was again extended, and Wade, with his greatest team of all seasons, journeyed to Pasadena and won a decisive victory from Washington State.

Continuing his successful tactics of his former years, Wallace Wade at Duke University is painting the picture of football in a new light.

Wallace Wade

Athletics at Duke

THE Duke Blue Devils were exceedingly fortunate this year in having as their leader a most efficient and capable veteran. Carl Schock, for three years the brilliant mainstay of the Duke forward wall, has made a name for himself as a cool and dependable mainspring of the Duke machine.

Modest and unassuming, Captain Schock has brought to the Blue Devil eleven that characteristic which is so necessary for an efficient and smooth-working team; never crowding into the spotlight, but always the essential element in every offensive play, and ever and ever the life of the defense, Carl has proved his superior ability through three years of fine performance.

The 1933 eleven has established a record for future teams to challenge. Their unbroken line of victories have brought them national recognition and established the name of Duke University in the football world. Their achievements this year have furnished that publicity and impetus which will contribute much to the continuation of the triumphs of 1933.

This year's accomplishments seem to foreshadow a new era in football history at Duke University. While the growth of the school itself has undoubtedly suggested the idea of greater athletic teams at Duke, the sudden and successive victories of the 1933 Blue Devils far surpassed the hopes of the most optimistic. Perhaps future years will see further glories for school and team.

The 1933 football season saw Duke not only putting her best team in history on the field, but also of producing her first All-American player. When the experts of the great fall pastime drew up their "perfect" teams, Fred Crawford, Blue Devil tackle, was an unanimous choice for the mythical elevens.

It was inevitable that the big Waynesville, N. C., lad would receive the highest honor accorded a football player. For three years Crawford was a main contributor to Duke's football success. In his first year of varsity competition he starred at an end position and in his last two years, playing tackle, proved to be the South's outstanding lineman.

Combining brawn and brain, Crawford was in the words of Coach Wallace Wade, "the greatest lineman I have ever seen." Fast and powerful, he was uncanny in his quick charging and in covering punts. His remarkable performance in the memorial 10-2 victory over Tennessee will go down in the annals of Duke athletics as one of the greatest exhibitions ever turned in by a representative of the University.

Coaching Staff

DUKE takes great pride in the fact that she has one of the best coaching staffs in the entire country to guide the destinies of her athletic teams. That each man on the staff is deserving of the department which he heads is bolstered by the meritable records which are credited to their respective careers.

JACK COOMBS, "The wonder man of baseball" came to Duke as coach in 1929 after a brilliant career of professional ball. In his five years here he has turned out one Southern Conference team and three state championship teams. Aside from being an excellent coach he is very popular with the whole student body.

CARL VOYLES, first assistant to Wade and head track coach, comes here highly recommended by the University of Illinois authorities. His record at the latter school has been continued at Duke as his track teams are rapidly becoming of championship calibre.

EDDIE CAMERON, from point of service in the Blue Devil fold, is a veteran of the staff. Once a great athlete at Washington and Lee, he is now regarded as one of the best athletic tutors in the South. His duties are divided between instructing the backfield of the football team and being head coach of basketball. Four consecutive court championships have been annexed during his regime.

DUMPY HAGLER, former pupil of Wade at Alabama, is an assistant football coach. He drills the linemen and from some of the stars he has developed it is apparent that he is doing his job well.

HERSCHEL CALDWELL, a teammate of Hagler's, has the important duty of acclimating the freshmen to college athletics. Yearling squads under his direction have done exceptionally well.

LENOX BAKER, although he had no actual coaching job, contributed greatly to the success of the Blue Devil sports through his unusual ability as a trainer.

ALEX WAITE, was added to the staff by Coach Wade in view of his excellent record at Asheville high. He has developed some good material for the varsity in his work with the reserve squads.

FREDDIE SINGTON, All-American at Alabama, instructs the linemen on both the varsity and the freshman football squads.

K. C. GERARD, who was transferred from the University of Illinois athletic staff, has made intramural sports an extensive part of the undergraduate program at Duke.

ADD WARREN, MARSHALL CRICHTON, BOB TUTTLE and JACK PERSONS have shown marked success and ability in boxing and wrestling, golf, cross country and swimming respectively.

WHILE performances of past gridiron machines at Duke had ranked them among the better football teams of the nation, the record and play of the Blue Devils of 1933 reformed the severest of critics into the most enthusiastic of admirers for the Wade-coached eleven and established Duke as one of the few great football teams of the nation.

Not since the millionaire tobacco magnate and philanthropist endowed Trinity College with a large portion of his fortune has Duke gained as much recognition. Papers all over the country ran weekly stories of the Blue Devils march to the peak, and millions of people followed with intense interest the upward struggle of a mighty aggregation that swooped down like a cyclone on everything in its path wreaking havoc and devastation.

Bringing praise to the school, to the state, and to the South, this gallant Duke eleven, exhibiting an indominable fighting spirit, marched courageously through the first nine games without a single reverse. With the Rose Bowl in immediate sight they prepared themselves for the tenth and last contest with Georgia Tech. Huge crowds of alumni and students followed their team to Atlanta to witness the final. . . . The score of that game indicated a victory for the Engineers, but there was something bigger than a score involved—it was the sheer determination and grit manifest by that courageous fighting spirit of eleven blue-clad warriors. Not a single soul who went to Grant field on that dismal December afternoon doubted the true greatness of the Blue Devils.

Besides winning the State and Southern Conference championships, the Devils placed five men on the all-conference selection in Cox, Hendrickson, Rogers, Crawford and Schock. Crawford was chosen All-American tackle.

DUKE 37—V. M. I. 6

Making their debut at Memorial Stadium in Greensboro, before a crowd of about fifteen thousand people, Wallace Wade's untried Blue Devils went into action. There was a question in the mind of every Duke follower, hope in the heart of every student and alumnus, and perhaps a prayer upon the lips of each coach.

Amidst all the fever and excitement Coach Wade surprised everyone by calmly starting his second team. The game started slowly with V. M. I. drawing first blood by blocking a punt and recovering for a touchdown. However it only stimulated the Devils into action, for two plays later Rossiter passed to McAninch who raced thirty yards for the initial Duke touchdown of the season. Wade at the end of the first quarter sent in a first team that was raring to go. The crowded stands were to see a spectacle of terrific drive and power not equalled before in Duke history. With Cox ripping the line wide open and Cornelius and Laney slashing the tackles and racing the ends, they presented a machine that was unstoppable. The work of the line showed drive and power too good to be true. The game on the whole was more than promising despite the fact that it was the first, and every one on the squad saw action.

week away, the Devils did not tend to exert themselves to any great degree with a not-too-powerful outfit from Wake Forest. The game at first was rather listless with Wade again starting the second team, which proceeded to stop everything the Deacons had to throw. Real power was again shown when the first team went into action. The highlight of the game was a heave from Laney to Rogers with the little Duke end making a sensational one-handed catch over the goal-line.

DUKE 10—TENNESSEE 2

The game of games—one that will be a continual thrill in the hearts of Duke supporters for years to come. For a week the campus was in a steady upheaval of excitement: bonfires, placards of "Beat Tennessee" were plastered all over the city, and to top it all a large body of returning alumni came to see a great Blue Devil machine in action.

All dope pointed to a win for Tennessee; the Blue Devils had yet to face strong competition, and they were stacked up against a team that was rocking the country with victories—a team rated one of the best in the nation. There were perhaps thirty thousand people in the stadium when the opening whistle blew and many more filing in that were to see a determined bunch of Blue Devils blast the mighty Vols into submission.

Led by the mighty Crawford, who undoubtly played the greatest game of his career, and the flashy little end, Rogers, a super Duke line proceeded to uproot a heavier Tennessee forward wall and stop the mighty Feathers and Brackett dead in their tracks. Meanwhile "Corky" Cornelius, in person, was slashing the Vol tackles like a cyclone.

In the first period Cornelius booted a field goal from the thirty-yard line which gave the Devils a 3-0 lead at half time. It was a sweet field goal to the Devils for it off-set the goal that gave them such a heart-breaking defeat last year. In the second half Durner probably saved the game when he recovered a blocked punt with no less than half the Vols having their hands on it at one time or another.

With the score 3-2 and the sound of the final gun drawing near, McAninch took a punt on the run and returned it sixty yards to the Vol fifteen-yard line. Four plays later Cornelius drove over the weak side of the line for fourteen yards to sew up the greatest victory in Duke football history.

DUKE 19—DAVIDSON 7

Traveling over to Davidson the following Saturday the Devils slowed up a bit and were forced to put on pressure to defeat a fighting bunch of Wildcats. It was more or less a breathing spell with such games as Kentucky and Auburn approaching. Alexander and Ward playing most of the game carried the fireworks of a slow attack.

DUKE 14—KENTUCKY 7

One of the hardest games of the season was played in Lexington with the boys from the "blue grass." It was not until the last quarter that Cox plunged over the center of the Big Kentucky line to give the Devils the final seven points that won the game. Duke scored first when continual thrusts at the line by Cornelius, Cox and Laney carried the ball to a position for Cox to carry it over. A big thorn in the side of the Devils throughout the entire game was Ker-cheval, whose line plunging and punting kept them on the defense a great part of the game. Incidently it was Kercheval that passed to Darby for the touchdown that tied the game up at half time.

DUKE 13—AUBURN 7

Returning home the Blue Devils came through with another great victory when they sent the Plainsmen home with a crushing defeat. The score does not show the marked superiority of the Duke team, as they missed no less than three other touchdowns by inches or costly fumbles. Hendrickson was instrumental in the first touchdown when he took a long heave from Rossiter and ran to the one-yard line where Cox carried it over. Incidently Hendrickson was at this time approaching the point of being recognized as the cleverest field general in the Southern Conference.

DUKE 38—MARYLAND 7

With the second team supplying the punch, the Blue Devils completely trampled Maryland into submission. Alexander and Ward ripped the Maryland line to pieces, and it gave the first team a much needed rest.

DUKE 21—CAROLINA 0

If last year's victory was not enough for Duke supporters, this year's victory should put satisfaction in the hearts of all Dukeites, for the Devils proceeded to wipe up the field with a fighting bunch of Tarheels. Hendrickson taking over ball-carrying duties thrilled the crowd with a brilliant exhibition of leather toting that produced two touchdowns in the very first quarter. To show the marked superiority of the Blue Devils,

Wade played the second team about half the game. Throughout the game the team worked like a well-oiled machine and looked equal to the national recognition it was beginning to get.

DUKE 6—STATE 0

Always one of the toughest games—the State jinx was finally broken in the roughest game ever seen here. It was Jack Alexander who stimulated the Duke team into a last period touchdown drive, finally carrying the ball over on the heels of the mighty Crawford. It was the injuries received in this game that helped in the heart-breaking defeat at Georgia Tech the following Saturday.

GEORGIA TECH 6—DUKE 0

With the Rose Bowl staring them in the face, Wallace Wade's untied, undefeated Blue Devils journeyed down to Atlanta, Georgia, to battle Georgia Tech's wrecking crew in the final game of the 1933 season. Despite the fact that they were in the worst physical condition that they had been in at any time during the season as a result of their bitter struggle with State the preceding Saturday, the Wade men were favored to win their tenth straight victory. That game at Grant field will always be remembered by Duke supporters. After a very unspectacular first period, in which both teams played careful defensive football, the Engineers drew first blood at the beginning of the second quarter. By a series of beautifully executed reverses and end runs they succeeded in marching the ball down to the Devils six-yard line. The Duke line held for two downs, but a beautifully executed double reverse to the left side produced a touchdown for them in their third attempt. They failed to convert, however, and the Blue Devils left the field at half time trailing 6 to 0. A telegram from the Rose Bowl Committee inviting them as the East's representative in the New Year's classic in case they defeated Georgia Tech was read to them by Coach Wade at the half, and the effect upon the entire squad was almost electrical. They returned to the field at the beginning of the second half a new team, and immediately proceeded a touchdown march. With Cox and Hendrickson alternating in carrying the ball, they marched from their own forty-yard line to their opponent's two. It was first down for Duke on the two-yard line, and on the first play Cox cracked the center of the line for what looked like a sure touchdown, but the referee put the ball in play inches from the goal. On the next play Hendrickson did go over and Duke supporters let loose all of the yells and roars that they had been holding back, but their yells were doomed to disappointment because the headlinesman ruled Freddie Crawford, Duke's All-American tackle, off-sides on the play, and the ball was set back five yards. On fourth down Rossiter passed over the goal line to Wentz, but this touchdown was also ruled illegal because the ball had touched Cornelius' hand before Wentz received it. The Blue Devils threatened to score on several other occasions before the game ended, but the final gun saw them on the short end of a 6 to 0 count. Despite this heart-breaking defeat, the 1933 season was the most successful one in Duke history and much credit should be given to the coaches and players for their splendid achievement. Their 1933 performance definitely put Duke in the national spotlight, and focused the eyes of the football world on them for 1934.

BASKETBALL

Coach Eddie Cameron

Basketball

FORMING a well balanced outfit from a nucleus of three seasoned veterans in Jim Thompson, forward, and Herb Thompson and Phil Weaver, guards, Coach Eddie Cameron carried his charges through a very successful season during the 1934 cage schedule.

In a twenty-two game schedule which included the best available opposition in the South in addition to the two northern teams, Army and Navy, the Duke five dropped but five encounters. The greatest margin of defeat was five points, proving that when losing they suffered no special humiliation.

At the close of the tournament the Thompson brothers, Jim and Herb, were named by sports writers on the mythical All-Southern team at forward and guard respectively. Some were convinced that these two boys were the best ever to don a Duke uniform. Phil Weaver received great praise for his work in the tourney also.

Starting the year off with a pre-Christmas trip, the Devils handed the Richmond Rotary quint a 34 to 22 defeat in their opener while Coach Cameron experimented with several prospects. The only loss of this jaunt was experienced on the following night when Catholic University came from behind during the closing minutes to gain a 33-31 win over Duke; Jim Thompson accounted for 20 points in this game. Baltimore was taken into camp by a 33-25 score to end the trip.

Making their debut before a home crowd after the holidays, the Duke quint downed Clemson 36-23. Narrowing down to competition within the Big Five, both Wake Forest and Davidson were defeated, the former, 38-29, and the latter, 40-35. The guarding of Weaver and Herb Thompson featured these victories.

Swinging into the North again, the Devils advanced on Army. The big guns of the West Pointers were silenced and Duke's Big Bertha, Jim Thompson, hit the target with amazing regularity to ring up another win for his team, 27-25. It was a bit of revenge for the Blue and White, which lost to the Cadets two years back by a two-point margin. Maryland rallied in the late stages to defeat the Devils 37-33 on the following night. Navy, with an unusually strong outfit, was topped by the Duke five in probably their best game of the entire season. Every man on the team gave a superb performance, but Jim Thompson stood out in the attack on the Middies scoring 16 points. The Duke flash was praised by the sports writers present as "the best basketball player who ever played in the Navy gym." The final score was 29-23.

Back on native soil, the Devils gained a 41-20 verdict over V. M. I. and followed up with wins over State, 33-29; Virginia, 26-17; and Washington and Lee, 41-37. During the week-end of examinations the Duke five renewed an age-old rivalry with the University of North Carolina. The Tar Heels won 25-21, but both teams played excellent ball. Jim Thompson rang the hoop five times from the center of the floor, and with his 11 points led the scorers for the night.

Touring the Old Dominion State, the Devils first encountered Washington and Lee in Lynchburg. The Generals were no match for the Duke cagers as the latter triumphed easily, 41-27. Following this victory the Devils added two more conquests in rapid succession as both V. P. I. and V. M. I. went down in defeat before the Cameron-coached outfit; the former 45-15 and the latter 45-32.

The Devils met Wake Forest again and downed the Deacons 37-21. Davidson succumbed by the top-heavy score of 57-25 as Jim Thompson went on another rampage and with his brother, Herb, accounted for a majority of points scored. In another court classic that drew fans from all over the state, the Tar Heels invaded the Duke gymnasium and again eked out victory, this time 30-25. From the spectators point of view the contest was almost perfect and for the Duke supporters the only thing wanting was the score. A few days later South Carolina's highly touted Gamecocks invaded the locals' lair and barely nosed out a 26-23 verdict. Herb Thompson and Connie Mack, Jr., giant pivot man, turned in some good defensive work against great scoring threats. Coming to the final game of the season the Devils played host to N. C. State and turned the Wolfpack away by a 41-34 score.

Entering the Southern Conference Tournament in Raleigh as one of the four seeded teams Duke drew V. M. I. as her first round opponent. The Devils disposed of the Cadets by a 37-14 score. For the third time Duke was scheduled to meet the Tar Heels who had twice been their conquerors and who were favored to repeat. However, the Devils refused to make it three in a row and put up a fight that was too much for the Tar Heels in a battle that even surpassed the two previous classics. With little more than a minute left to play and the Tar Heels staging a "freeze," Herb Thompson cleverly stole the ball from Weathers, Carolina forward, and dribbled down the floor for a two-pointer that put the Devils in the lead for the first time. Only an instant later Brother Jim put the game on ice as he swished the net for another goal to give his team the final margin of victory, 21-18. Against Washington and Lee in the finals Duke suffered a heart-breaking defeat from a team over which they had shown convincing superiority during the regular season. It was the fourth time that Coach Eddie Cameron carried a team into the championship battle and the fourth time that he had witnessed his own outfit defeated in the titular setto. The Generals cut down what seemed to be a comfortable lead at half-time in favor of the Devils and grabbed a one-point advantage twenty seconds before the game ended. The final score was 30-29 in favor of the Generals.

Coach Jack Coombs

Baseball 1933

COMPOSED of five veterans and four Sophomores, the 1933 Blue Devil nine enjoyed a very successful season despite the fact that they failed to win the state championship. Under the capable tutelage of Coach Jack Coombs, who has been turning out winning teams during the six years that he has been here, the 1933 team turned in twelve victories as stacked up against seven defeats.

The season officially got under way by the Devils playing host to the strong Michigan State nine. Although the game was a very uninteresting affair from the spectator's viewpoint, due to the many errors by both teams, the invaders were beaten 8 to 7.

Little Elon came to Duke for the next game and was easily defeated 6 to 3. The two veteran hurlers, Bobby Coombs and Mort Flohr, took care of the pitching assignment and did a very good job of it. Playing their first Southern Conference game against the V. P. I. Gobblers, from Blacksburg, Virginia, the Blue Devils came out on the long end of a 6 to 2 score. In this game Earl Wentz, Duke left fielder, hit a home run over the left field fence, the only ball that has ever been hit out of the Duke park during a varsity contest. What was supposed to be a warm-up affair with Guilford College was turned into the biggest upset of the year when the Quakers beat the Blue Devils 8 to 7. The Durham Bulls were next in line, and a double-header was played against the professional team during the Easter holidays. The professionals pounded three Duke pitchers all over the lot to take a one-sided 14 to 4 victory in the first game, but they were shut out in the second 7 to 0.

The annual Easter-Monday double-header was played against the University of Maryland and resulted in two victories for the Coombs team, and Flohr turned in two masterful performances, Coombs winning the first game 8 to 0, and Flohr taking the nightcap 5 to 2. North Carolina State was the next victim of Coombs' curves, and the All-American pitcher turned in his second consecutive shut out. The final score was 5 to 0 in Duke's favor.

Duke's first defeat within the Big Five came at the hands of Wake Forest, last year's state champions. Journeying over to the latter's home grounds, the Blue Devils dropped a 3-0 decision to the Deacons. Two brilliant southpaws, Flohr, of Duke, and Barnes, of Wake Forest, hooked up in a spectacular pitcher's battle, with the Deacon hurler gaining the decision over his rival as a result of the inability of Duke batmen to hit with men on bases.

The next game with State at Raleigh resulted in another defeat. Bobby Coombs suffered his first defeat of the season, due largely to Jim Thompson's costly error in the first inning. The brilliant Duke right fielder allowed a ground ball to go between his legs in the first inning and four runs scored as a result of it. It is doubtful though whether Duke would have won even if this had not happened because the boys were sadly off on their batting.

The high light of the entire season was the annual trip north where the Blue Devils defeated three of the strongest teams in the East without suffering a defeat. Princeton was the first victim and fell 8-7. The most spectacular part of the contest was Flohr's terrific home run smash into the right field bleachers.

Captain Kersey

In New York City the next day, with no less than five big league scouts looking on, Bobby Coombs turned in the greatest pitching performance of his college career. He let the strong Fordham nine down with three well-scattered hits, all of them singles, while his teammates batted out a 3-0 victory over what was supposed to be the best college team in the East. It was the first time in four years that Fordham had been shut out on their own field. The next day in New York, Manhattan

College was defeated 5-2. Lakey Harkrader was on the mound for the Devils and pitched a good game. The games with Maryland and George Washington were rained out.

Returning home, the Blue Devils received a 9-3 set-back at the hands of the Davidson Wildcats. The first Carolina game also went against the Blue Devils. Big Joe Griffith for the Tar Heels had a slight edge on Bobby Coombs and pitched his mates to a well-earned 2-1 victory. Duke broke back into the win column by taking a 7 to 4 decision from Davidson, and by gaining a 4-3 decision the next day against their old nemesis, Julie Barnes, of Wake Forest. The final game of the season was dropped to Carolina 2-1. It was almost an exact duplicate of the first contest between the two teams, Griffith again getting the better of Coombs in a great pitchers' battle.

At the close of the season letters were given to the following men: Schnure, Brackbill, Flohr and Harkrader, pitchers; Henderson, Kersey, Michael, Peckham, Wagner and Weaver, infielders; and Wentz, Mitchell and Thompson, outfielders. Bobby Coombs went straight to the Philadelphia Athletics after receiving his diploma last spring.

Track 1933

THE Four Flying Seniors, Bradsher, Brownlee, Fulmer and Lewis, composing the greatest quartet of trackmen ever assembled at Duke, supplied the punch that carried the Blue Devil cinder-men through a highly successful season.

Competing in four dual meets the Devils emerged victorious in three, while in the state and conference events they captured the runner-up position. Carolina was the only thorn in the path, as the dual meet reverse and the second place gained in both tournaments was due directly to a more versatile Tar Heel outfit.

In the field events the Devils were rather weak. Thus the point-making foursome accounted for the margin of victory in the contests won. Brownlee, who entered three events, the 100-yard dash, the 200-yard dash, and the 220-yard low hurdles, took three firsts in every dual meet and the state tournament to make a personal donation of 15 points for the team on each of these occasions. Henry Fulmer added 10 points in every scheduled contest and the state tournament with honors for the broad jump and 440-yard dash. Charlie Bradsher and Red Lewis consistently broke the tape ahead of the field in the 880-yard and one-mile run respectively. In other words, Duke was virtually conceded seven first places by her opponents before the meet began. The final score depended upon the success of Devil's field events.

William and Mary, the first meet on the schedule, was held at Williamsburg. Led by the four speed merchants, Duke piled up a comparatively easy 72½ to 53½ victory. Bird, in the two-mile run, Ripley, in the pole vault, and Reichman, in the 440-yard dash, were also features of the day.

Playing host to Washington and Lee's Generals on their home grounds, the Duke tracksters added another one-sided win, 85-41. Rather than being pushed by the General cindermen in the running events, the Devil foursome barely swept across the finish line in front of some of their teammates who pressed them closely. Shackford won second place to Brownlee in the 220-yard low hurdles, and Tarrall extended the same Brownlee in the dashes. For the latter reason and some good work in the field by Stevens, who tossed the shot, Ripley, in the pole vault, and H. Lewis, in the high jump, the score was considerably higher than in the first meet.

Duke was considered as having the best chance ever to defeat the Tar Heels, who had the advantage of years of track supremacy behind them, but, although the Devils gained more first places, Carolina contributed a substantial amount of seconds and thirds to keep their marvelous record intact and downed the Blue Devils 66-60. It was a thrilling spectacle throughout and not until the last event was it possible to choose the winner. Brownlee, Bradsher, Fulmer and Red Lewis again furnished the fireworks for Duke.

After the Davidson meet which was won handily, 78½-47½, the Devils prepared for the state meet on the following week-end. Carolina again copped the state title, but only after experiencing some stiff opposition from Duke. Red Lewis won the mile-run, Henry Fulmer took first in both the 440-yard dash and the broad jump, Charlie Bradsher set a new record in the 880-yard run, and Brownlee annexed new state records for both the low hurdles and 220-yard dash in addition to winning the 100-yard dash.

At the Southern Conference meet, also held in the Duke stadium, the Devils again placed second to Carolina. The large crowd present, many of whom attended to witness the achievements of Duke's great stars, were well repaid for coming. Many felt that they received more than their money's worth in the thrilling one-mile run that ended with the sensational spurt by Red Lewis for a new conference record in the remarkable time of 4:15.7. In addition to the exciting race between Lauck and Lewis was Brownlee's fast pace in the 220-yard dash and 220-yard low hurdles, the latter setting a new conference record. Coming as a climax to the brilliant exhibition was the fast mile relay which the Devil speed merchants took in the amazing time of 3:18.8 for another new record. The relay team was composed of Fulmer, Bradsher, Reichman and Brownlee. Although they failed to win the championship, the Devils gloriously redeemed themselves in these sparkling individual performances.

A Successful Year

Conducting a vigorous campaign to make this a banner year in Duke University athletic history, the Blue Devils' athletics teams came through in fine style to assemble numerous sports titles.

The highlight of this year's athletic contests was the making of history by the gridiron representatives in their sensational wins against all comers but Georgia Tech. And in this process of submerging, they also annexed a state and Southern Conference title. The season as a whole was very successful and predicted even greater things for Duke football.

Not long thereafter the cross-country team went out and got itself a Southern Conference championship. The members of this outfit, led by Capt. Jerry Bray, beat the cream of the South's harriers over one of the most difficult courses in this part of the country. And while on the subject of running, the indoor track squad, led by the able Johnny Brownlee, did a fine job in leaving Carolina and several others behind to win the conference championship.

Coach Eddie Cameron's basketeers did themselves proud by their showing throughout the state, winning from traditional rivals and losing out only to Washington and Lee in the finals of the annual tournament at Raleigh. The team loses many of its outstanding players, but Eddie still has fine material from which he should be able to build up a fine team.

Although Add Warren's grapple and grunt men did not retain their laurels, they did rather well, but they left it up to the members of the cauliflower industry, the boxers, to bring home the bacon. The boxers, though hampered by lack of material, came through handsomely. Freshman proteges show promise of adding weight and strength to the varsity ringmen.

This has truly been a wonderful year for Duke teams, including, of course, the wonderful showing made by the swimmers who cleaned up in the state and were runners-up in the conference meet.

The marks created by our boys this year will be something for future generations of Duke teams to shoot at, but it seems to be a general opinion that it will be a long time yet before five state championships, two Southern Conference championships, and runners-up position in two others will be attained.

Mgr. Townley Scelza Jester Sides Scott Onisko Coach Warren

Boxing

UNLIKE the record made by other Duke athletic teams, that of the 1934 boxing team was a rather disastrous one. The mittmen, led by Leroy Sides, failed to annex a single victory during their abbreviated schedule. Coach Addison Warren, handicapped by lack of material in the heavier weights, was forced to forfeit matches in these events, thereby losing points which might have spelt victory for the Blue Devils had they not been defaulted.

The Blue Devils opened their season against Clemson in the home ring. The Tigers, while being considered as strong opponents, were not thought to be able to triumph over the Devils, despite their advantage in the heavier weights. However, the Clemson lads displayed a high brand of boxing and upset the Devils by a $4\frac{1}{2}$ to $3\frac{1}{2}$ count.

The next opponent for the Duke pugilists was N. C. State, 1933 state champions. The Wolfpack earned a draw with the Devils in actual fighting, each team registering three victories, but the decision was awarded to the champions when Duke forfeited three matches.

Maryland and Carolina also outpointed the Blue Devils in matches and brought about the closing of one of the most disastrous seasons ever experienced by a Duke boxing squad.

Vincent Onisko, fighting in the bantamweight division, made his way to the semi-final round of the Southern Conference tourney at Charlottesville, as did Joe Scelza, featherweight; Joe Jester, middleweight; and Sides, welterweight. Only Sides, however, reached the finals. The diminutive captain successfully made his way through two fights but was badly injured in his sem-final match and had to forfeit his right to box in the finals. Fred Lloyd and Joe Jester were elected co-captains of the 1935 team. Lloyd was unable to box during the past season because of an appendix operation early in the winter.

Wrestling

Losing the services of five men from last year's wrestling team, Coach Warren and Captain Troxler faced the task of shaping a formidable squad from a group consisting of only three veterans and many recruits willing to try the grunt and groan racket. The men worked hard and when the season was over it was clear that "old man experience" had tripped a hard fighting bunch of Devils.

Although the wrestlers won only one of their three meets, all three were closely fought and many cheerful and gainful results can be remembered.

The first match was at Chapel Hill against the strong Carolina team. Duke was defeated 17-9, but we remember the victories gained by Captain Troxler, Reed and Apple; Killen's heart-breaking loss to Carolina's Captain Matthewson; and Chandlee's game struggle with the experienced Heller.

The next match found the grapplers on an exciting trip to Appalachian State Teachers' College where they dropped a close decision of 16-14. Here we remember Killen gaining a fall, Captain Troxler, Chandler and Apple winning by time advantages, and Benner's close loss to Captain Moore, of Appalachian.

The final match found Duke defeating Davidson 19-11. Many Duke fans enjoyed this home victory and remember Captain Troxler and Chandler pinning their foes, also time advantages gained by Killen, Dodd and Apple.

In preparation for their meet with State, the season was brought to a disastrous close. Devil supporters were looking forward to a Duke victory when an attack of impitigo forced cancellation of all remaining contests including a trip to Florida, and entries in the Southern Conference tournament.

Next year's team should be a credit to Duke. The loss of only two men, Captain Troxler and Apple, incidently both undedefeated, should be overcome with the experience gained by Chandlee, Killen and McGrail.

Tennis

THE Duke tennis team, playing under adverse weather conditions much of the time and forced to postpone some of their matches, turned in a fairly good season during 1933.

Captain Barney Welsh and several other lettermen from last year welcomed into their ranks Johnny Higgins, brilliant freshman netter of 1932, as fall practice began an intensive training grind for the spring campaign.

Large crowds turned out for all the matches played here, especially for the Carolina match. The latter court exhibition was featured by the hard-fought battle between Welsh and Hines, the Carolina star finally winning after coming perilously close to defeat. The Tar Heels annexed team play honors, 8-1.

On the northern trip the Devils lost to Navy and Virginia, but defeated Temple, Lehigh and Johns Hopkins. In the Navy match Welsh lost another hard-fought contest to Loughlin in extra-game sets. Back home from their venture into the North, the home netmen made a clean sweep of all matches played with Wake Forest and State, but lost to Carolina, 7-2.

In the Southern conference tournament Higgins was defeated by Wright in the semi-finals of singles-play, but Welsh advanced no further than the first round when he suffered a humiliating upset defeat from Willis, Carolina. The doubles-play of Higgins and Welsh took the ranking Devil partners to the final round where they were ousted by Hines and Wright.

At the North-South amateur tourney in Pinehurst, Welsh made a remarkably good showing before bowing to George Lott, member of the United States Davis Cup team. On one occasion the Duke representative was within six points of the match.

Letters were awarded to Captain Welsh, Higgins, Butler, Peake, Morefield, Nixon, McNeil and Student Manager Baird.

Swimming

SOUTHERN conference laurels were awarded to the 1934 Duke swimming team on the heels of a most successful season. The Devilfish, coached by Jack Persons, lost two dual meets during the season, but managed to chalk up victories where they were needed.

The first opponent of the season was State which was met in an early meet prior to the Christmas holidays. State managed to pull out a 49 to 35 victory over the Devils in a meet featured by several close races. In the return meet, the Wolfpack was defeated by a more decisive count, 54 to 29. On the annual northern trip through the old Dominion, the Devilfish dropped a meet with the Shoreham Nations club of Washington by the score of 49 to 29, but went on to defeat Virginia. The meet with Virginia was as close a meet as could be. At the end of the meet the score was 42-all, but the decision was awarded to the Duke natators because of their victory in the relay races.

Returning to Charlottesville later in February, the swimmers chalked up 43 points to cop the Southern conference title. In the conference meet two records were broken by Duke men. Carroll Dailey turned in one record-breaking performance in the 200-yard breast stroke, being clocked in the fast time of 2:58.6. The 400-yard relay team also shattered a conference record when Kraushaar, Burke, O'Conner and Whiting covered the distance in 3:59.2.

The team was captained during the season by Dennis O'Connor, who played a large part in the success of the team by his brilliant performances in the free style events.

Golf

FIVE victories and one loss, coupled with the Southern conference and state titles, comprise the brilliant record of the 1933 Duke golf team. The Blue Devil linksmen, led by Roger Peacock, astonished southern sports critics by their brilliant and consistent play throughout the season and wound up their season with a one-sided victory over Carolina for the Southern conference championship.

Captain Peacock, Bayard Storm, June Caldwell and Jake Sullivan made up the foursome which represented Duke on the fairways and were among the finest golfers in southern collegiate circles.

Rollins College was the first victim of the Devil foursome, falling by a 16 to 2 count on the Hope Valley course. Carolina was the second opponent and was subdued decisively by a 12 to 6 score. Following this match the Duke foursome departed for Virginia where they met their first and only defeat of the season at the hands of the University of Richmond by a count of 11½ to 6½. In the morning round of this match Peacock for the first time of his three years of varsity competition was defeated. Victories over Washington-Lee and William and Mary followed and the team returned to Carolina soil to take the state title by seven strokes with Carolina, Davidson and State following in the order named.

A few days after they had been crowned state champions, the Devils defeated Carolina in their return match, 11 to 7, in the final dual match of the year. The Sedgefield Country Club course of Greensboro was the scene of the conference tournament and the climax of a highly successful season. But two teams were entered in the tournament—Duke and Carolina and the Blue Devils wound up their play with a 26 stroke margin over their neighborly rivals. Peacock, Storm and Erwin Lexton, of Carolina, tied for the medal score with cards of 149 for 36 holes.

At the close of the season Jake Sullivan was elected to captain the 1934 squad which will have to display a high type of golf in order to better the record made by the finest team ever to represent Duke—the 1933 golf team.

Bray Bird Heritage Jester Ford

Cross Country

DUKE'S cross country team turned in the best record in years during the past season. By annexing both the state and Southern conference titles the long distance men accomplished all that was possible in their somewhat limited schedule which included four dual meets and the two tournaments.

The high spot of the season was the triumph over the strong Navy harriers at Annapolis. Indicative of their marked superiority in this meet was the decisive 23-32 score piled up by the Duke runners.

V. M. I. was taken with considerable ease as the veteran Blue and White joggers finished well to the fore with a one-sided 19-36 score.

The Blue Devils next faced their arch rivals from Carolina. The Tar Heels offered some keen competition but the Duke pacers won by a six-point margin, 26-32.

Davidson was the only team which really put a scare into the Devils. The Wildcats surprised by holding the Duke harriers to a tie score, 27-27.

In the annual Southern conference meet, held over the Carolina course, the Devils placed five out of the first seven men to break the tape to capture their second consecutive conference crown.

Leading the scorers on the Duke team were Bird and Bray who finished all their races well up in the front of the field.

At the end of the season letters were awarded to: Captain Bird, Bray, Heritage, Jester, Ford and Manager Ireland.

Intramural Athletics

COACH Carl Voyles, former mentor at the University of Illinois, came to Duke two years ago and brought with him the system of intramural athletics which proved most successful at the institution. He also brought with him Mr. Kenneth C. Gerard to take charge of the programs here at Duke. These men took action at once and have now built up one of the most useful sports programs here on the campus.

The primary use of intramural athletics is to allow those men who have not the ability to make a varsity team the chance to engage in competitive sport. The consequence is to build up a spirit of team play, the sacrifice of self to the good of the whole team, and, above all, that spirit of fair play which is the cardinal principle of competition in life itself.

To date, over fourteen hundred students have availed themselves of the benefits, both recreational and mental, which the intramural program has offered here. The following table gives a very good conception of the enthusiasm and support which has been received:

Fall Tennis, 145; Fall Track, 482; Touch Football, 507; Basketball, 612; Wrestling, 118; Boxing, 57; Swimming 60; Handball, 40; Playground Ball, 240; Golf, 36; Spring Tennis, 150; Spring Track, 110. Total to date, 2,557.

To date 2,557 boys have competed in intramural activities. This figure was determined by the number of entries in each sport received by the department. Some, however, competed in two or more sports, so that our original figure of over fourteen hundred is correct.

The interest in this phase of athletics has grown more and more every year, and this year, to prevent another runaway with the title by any one fraternity as was the case last year, the fraternities have manifested the finest spirit ever shown on the campus in any activity.

Nineteen hundred and thirty-three and thirty-four has been a banner year for the intramural department, and Coach Voyles has been loud in the praise of the student body. He has but one more wish aside from a Southern conference championship in football and track, and that is that the intramural program will be even more successful from now on than it has been in the past.

CHEER LEADERS

Bandel Soltman Mervine Graf Atkins

School Spirit

SCHOOL spirit is, perhaps, one of the most intangible, yet certainly one of the most important, elements that go to mould a great university. It is born in an atmosphere of good-fellowship, of contentment and well-being. There is a certain serenity about it, and yet it is at once vibrant, strangely alive. People sense it immediately and warm to its glow. Like kind words coming from nowhere, it fills the heart, and binds men together into one great family, proud of brotherhood and honor.

We have it here, and its growth is measured in generous sportsmanship. It came first with self-respect, was strengthened by generosity, and finally blossomed under idealism.

To enlarge on this scope of discussion in regard to creating enthusiasm and school spirit, there was organized this year the Trident Club. Its chief purpose was to stimulate interest in athletic teams and to act as a foundation for a thus far futile effort toward organized cheering. The club itself was made up of one representative from each fraternity on the campus and five non-fraternity men. The result was a greater stimulus in cheering, a colorful display which will rival almost any school in appearance, and a backing of our athletic teams to a point which is evidenced by the respective successful campaigns in all sports.

We may go further in the field and see that another contribution grew out of the system of unification of the Freshmen dormitories. This enabled boys with a common interest to begin their college life with those who were willing to coincide the idea and create an opening through which they could express their enthusiasm to a fuller degree than under previous conditions. This system has been quite recently inaugurated, but we expect this class to carry forward with them the spirit which they have built up among themselves.

A college may be accurately measured by its spirit, be it chivalrous, then that college is pledged to chivalry; be it selfish or apathetic, then these personal characteristics are to be found in the majority of its students. In short, it is a living thing, a creature shaped from the personalities of men. It represents to the world at large what we are, we who are creating something now, both for our college and for ourselves.

Though we return fifty years from now, yet shall we find a part of ourselves still within these walls—that part of us which now goes to build school spirit. Let us build well!

Freshman Football

UNDER the capable tutelage of Coach Herschel Caldwell and his assistants, Waite and Sington, the Blue Imp gridders gained some valuable experience in their brief five-game schedule.

The loss of two Big Five tilts cost the Duke yearlings the state championship which had been in their possession for two years. A fumble early in the game accounted for the lone touchdown scored in the game with the Wolflets providing for their margin of victory, 6-0. On "Herschel Caldwell Day," staged in honor of the freshman coach, the Baby Deacs refused to enter into the spirit of the occasion and eventually drubbed their hosts 12-6.

Recovering from their losing habit, the Duke frosh scored a 12-0 win over the Carolina Freshmen in a game that featured the running and kicking of Clarence Parker, star Blue Imp quarterback. Continuing their improved form the Imps took on the Cadets from Oak Ridge and won a one-sided tilt, 33-0. The Wildkittens from Davidson proved the last victim as the Duke Freshmen ran up an 18-6 win.

Unusually big and rugged, the members of the Freshman squad should offer many potential linemen and backs for next year's varsity eleven. Parker, a triple threat back, promises to be an outstanding contender for the 1934 backfield with his exceptional all-round ability; while Smathers, a speedy halfback; Evans, a fast aggressive end; and big Joe Cardwell, a tackle, are excellent prospects.

Thus it seems that the noteworthy record of Coach Wallace Wade's Blue Devils this season has a good chance of being continued.

Freshman Basketball

DROPPING but three contests out of the twelve on schedule, the Blue Imp cagers compiled an impressive record during the last season.

State, Davidson and Carolina were the yearling quints to defeat the Duke Freshmen. The Wolflets and Baby Tar Heels eked out victories by the narrow one-point margin, while the Wildkittens set the locals back by a mere four point margin.

In other games during the season the Imps toppled Carolina's frosh, 26-21; and the Wolflets, 36-27, to avenge for two of the reverses which they suffered. Thus the Wildkittens were the only ones not to experience defeat at the hands of the Duke Freshmen cagers.

Wake Forest, the remaining Big Five opponent, was twice the victim of the Blue Imp sharpshooters by scores of 37-21 and 23-21. Other victories were chalked up over preparatory schools: Oak Ridge, Massanutten, Darlington, Campbell and Asheville.

Outstanding members of the Freshman five were: Riley, forward, who was leading scorer; Bell, center; Hoffman, forward; and Barley, guard. In addition to these four men several reserves, including Huiskamp, Podger, Ambler and Cheek, bid fair to make serious the competition for places on the varsity next year.

With the loss of some of its greatest stars from the varsity, such as the Thompson brothers and Phil Weaver, Coach Eddie Cameron's varsity basketball team is suffering a misfortune which will have to be overcome by the developing of new stars from those now on the varsity and from the Freshman squad of the present season. The Freshman squad will aid greatly in filling the vacancies.

Freshman Baseball

THE 1933 Freshman baseball team had a very successful season under the able tutelage of Coach Caldwell. The team won the state championship by defeating Wake Forest twice, North Carolina once and splitting two games with N. C. State. The Implets were even more successful in their games outside the league. Louisburg College opened up the Freshman baseball schedule and the Imps showed some good baseball in turning them back. Pete Naktenis was on the mound for the frosh and showed the class that had been expected. Coach Coombs promises a great future for this big boy. The team went through the preliminary schedule defeating, after Louisburg, a good Oak Ridge Academy team twice. A game with Danville High School was rained out.

The Freshmen had a good mound staff headed by Pete Naktenis along with Herb Brettell and Gus Bell. Al Konopka showed good form in his catching duties and knew how to handle a bat. John Shortell and Jack Alexander both showed good promise of becoming varsity men. Huiskamp was the only outfielder to hit his weight.

The team showed up well, and there is hope that they will take the place of the Seniors who have finished their baseball careers at Duke.

Freshman baseball, though naturally a minor attraction in the realm of athletics at Duke University, has made notable strides and unforeseen interest has been aroused in the student body. Looking upon these men as proteges for next year's varsity squad, we gladly recognize their ability and welcome the zeal which they have exhibited in their first year of university competitive sport.

UNITES HER TWO GREAT FLEETS
FACILITATES TRAVEL
BETWEEN EUROPE AND

AMERICA

Hamburg-American Line and North German Lloyd have built speed and rugged strength in their ships, comfort, cordiality and courtesy in their services.

United, these two great fleets concentrate their energies on these tested ideals. The speed of the BREMEN and EUROPA, fastest to England, France, Germany—the trim staunchness of the "Famous Four" NEW YORK, DEUTSCHLAND, ALBERT BALLIN, HAMBURG with First Class from $170—the splendor and swiftness of the COLUMBUS, the gracious restfulness of Cabin Class at $126.00 up on the quintet of Cabin Liners—ALL attest the power of German Ideals in sea-travel.

BUILDERS of DREAMS

VISIONS created by the imagination precede the achievement of any really great accomplishment. The ability to weave the threads of imagination into the finished fabric is equally important.

It has been the privilege of the EDWARDS & BROUGHTON COMPANY to cooperate with the Chanticleer staff in creating their vision into material form.

Such cooperation is one of the "visions" which precede the building of a successful business, and is a part of the working policy of the EDWARDS & BROUGHTON COMPANY.

To those Staffs desiring complete cooperation, we offer unexcelled service.

You, too, may be proud of your annual.

Alpha Sigma Sigma

At a recent mass meeting of the student body a wealth of new and worthy material for that ancient and venerable order of Alpha Sigma Sigma came to public attention for the first time.

Contrary to the usual, the grievance committee did not monopolize the field in this instance, but many worthy brethren were to be found among both committeemen and ordinary students.

It is with pleasure that we present a roster of those most worthy qualifiers herewith:

LOCAL OFFICERS

Chief Beer Guzzler	Dean Wanny
Horse's (Censored)	A. C. Jordan
Chief of War Maneuvers	Shackner
General Mistake	Ray Lundgren
General Dizziness	Richard Austin Smith
General Objection	Lou Ganz
General Howl	Allen Stanley
General Disuse	Fred Hague
Prom Queen	"Your Leader" Edmondson
Attendants	Don Picaso, Stew Kenyon, Lulu Hoover
Nursemaid to Pi Kappa Phis	Nancy Peterson
The Brooklyn Flash	Marie Assenheimer
Advocate of Free Love	Anita Knox

Came the Revolution

Editor's Note: This poem is reprinted from the May Archive in the belief that many students will not have discovered it within the pages of that popular publication and that it should be preserved for posterity.

They gathered in the stately hall,
This vast and motley crew,
A common grievance called them all,
And that is all they knew.
"Treat us like men!" the leaders cried
"We're bold and big and strong.
We will commit no homicide
And perpetrate no wrong."

The chairman was a comely lad
Whom friends call "Princley Joe,"
He thought this rabid stuff was bad
But didn't let it show.
The football captain took the floor,
He called for concentration
To turn administration o'er
(A major operation).
A letter was dispatched in haste
To that far-distant board
Which Mr. Duke set up with taste
To rule, to spend, to hoard.

In chapel on a Thursday morn
The students voiced their plea
To have a reign of freedom born
For you and you and me.
"Now, make no noise," said Princely Joe,
"And try and be restrained
For noise and strife will bring us woe
I like my hearers trained."
He read his list from stem to stern,
It wasn't very long.
The hearers couldn't quite discern
Just who had done them wrong.
"Our food is very poor," he said
"For what we have to pay.
They won't serve caviar in bed
For ninety cents a day."
To be specific is not smart,
As most of you can see,
For politics is just the art of ambiguity.

Up marched a student editor
Complete with black mustache
He gave his views, who knows what for?
For they were almost rash.
Our dean sat quiet in his seat,
He ventured not a word
For, as is needless to repeat,
He feared a gentle "bird."
When questioned as to what he thought,
He did not flinch or run,
There was one thing for which he sought
"I hope you have some fun."

Old Wallace Wade did hold his tongue
But feared the worst, 'tis said,
And thought it bad for man, when young,
To try and use his head.

The story spread from lip to lip,
It even got in Time (advt.)
And stodgy I did lose my grip
And set it forth in rhyme.
But through it all there stalked a man
As sinister as death,
A bomb in either pocket and
Blue fire for his breath.
Black villains always start these things
In fiction, song and myth,
And angels duck to save their wings
From Richard Austin Smith.

Our story dies a natural death
I'm sorry, as you see,
Our revolution lost its breath
Just like Technocracy.
For students come and rant and rave
To save us from oppression,
But what at sight appears so brave
Is youthful self-expression.
